The True Cotton Policy.

There has always been a disposition among the farmers and country merchants throughout the South to endeavor to control prices by curtailing acreage. The Pie-yunc has frequently pointed out that this was a short-sighted and unwise policy, because whatever benefit accrued to the producers from the higher prices was more than offset by the stimulation which the higher prices gave to the cultivation of cotton in other countries, not to speak of the unfavorable effect on consumption of such higher prices.

It is not meant that cotton should be produced at unprofitable prices. Overproduction is an evil which will speedily bring its own cure, but a year of overproduction does not do near the harm that a season of deliberate curtailment of acreage would, even where such curtailment has temporarily resulted in high prices. It must be admitted, however, that despite all the talk, short crops have been due in a very small measure to curtailment of acreage.

Despite the fluctuations which occur from year to year the world's consumption of cotton is steadily increasing, and it is the fixed belief of all who have investigated the subject that the consumption will yet reach figures several times greater than the present totals. So far this country has furnished the lion's share of the raw cotton, because American cotton gave the best quality for the money, as well as an adequate quantity of desired grades. It is important that this supremacy in the cotton trade should be maintained.

It is clear that if the world's consumption continues to increase, as the authorities declare it will, this country will have to steadily increase its production both by an extension of acreage as well as by better methods of cultivation. Unless we do this, other countries where it is possible to grow cotton certainly will. Should American cotton growers, by a system of deliberate restriction of acreage, succeed in keeping prices on a very high plane, competing cotton growing countries will be encouraged to increase their acreage so as to be able to make good the deficit in the world's consumption. This foreign competition it is important to prevent, hence the world's growing needs should be met mainly by increased production in this country. By allowing normal conditions to prevail, we need have no fear of foreign competition, as it is freely admitted by everybody that this country can grow better and cheaper cotton than any other country, hence the control of the world's markets must continue with us as long as we are prepared to supply the world's needs.

The proper policy, therefore, is for the South to grow as much cotton as the world will take at a profitable price. The cost of production should be cheapened as much as possible by intensified farming, diversification of crops and the production at home of the supplies required. Such a policy will keep the extension of acreage within reasonable bounds without a resort to concerted efforts to restrict the cotton area. It is only by keeping the price down to a figure which will discourage foreign cotton growers who have less natural facilities than we have that we can hope to retain the undisputed control of the cotton market which we now possess.—Pie-yunc.

The British government will begin this year to lay the cable that is to connect Canada with Australia and New Zealand. The manufacture of the cable is now in progress, and a gigantic cable-laying steamer, the largest afloat of its kind is building. The longest span of the cable will be from Vancouver island to Fanning island, a distance of 3,500 miles. The whole length of the cable will be about 8,000 miles. It will touch the Fiji islands and Norfolk island, and will reach Australia near Brisbane. From Bisoane it will cross to New Zealand.

My mother suffered a long time from distressing pains and general ill health due primarily to indigestion," says L. W. Spalding, Verona, Mo. "Two years ago I got her to try Kodol. She grew better at once and now, at the age of seventy-six, years anything she wants, remarking that she fears no bad effects as she has her bottle of Kodol handy." Don't waste time doctoring symptoms. Go after the cause. If your stomach is sound your health will be good. Kodol rests the stomach and strengthens the body by digesting your food. It is nature's own tonic. Jann & Suddath.

Indigestion, overeating, biliousness, nervousness, headache, dizziness, constipation, blood poisoning, flesh building, no health restore. It has no equal.

The Weary Wilhies have been having a particularly rough time of it late in Portugal. Lisbon, the capital city, has long been famous, or rather, notorious, for the number of the beggars and idlers within its gates, but recently the authorities seemed to waken to the fact that these ne'er-do wells were an incubus on society, and determined to get rid of the lot at one fell swoop. A general roundup up was made by the police, and a whole shippload was sent off to the African colonies. Public opinion in Lisbon is said to have approved of the measure, but if the same operation had been carried out in this country there would have been not a few sentimental idiots to raise a howl which would have been heard from the Golden Gate to Sandy Hook. There are one or two things in which an effete monarchial government can give a few pointers; shipping a
