Those Who Have Used Pe-ru-na Are the Only Ones Who Really Know

Many a matron has lengthened the days of her comely appearance by taking Peruna. To be beautiful, the body must be kept clean internally as well as externally. Peruna produces clean mucous membranes, the basis of facial symmetry, and a clear, healthy complexion.

Internal Catarrh.
Mrs. George C. Worstell, 11 River Road, Clarksburg, W. Va., writes: "I trust that no one will think from this that I want my name in public for any cause only to let sufferers know where they may find relief from many ailments. "I can truly say I have been much benefited by the use of Peruna. I feel better than I have for two years. It is the best medicine that I know for internal catarrh. "I have taken medicine from the doctors and found no relief; but when I began taking Peruna I could see that before I had finished taking the first bottle it was doing me good."

Pe-ru-na Tablets.
For two years Dr. Hartman and his assistants have incessantly labored to create Peruna in tablet form, and their strenuous labors have just been crowned with success. People who object to liquid medicines can now secure Peruna tablets. Each tablet is equivalent to one average dose of Peruna.

Pe-ru-na Prolonged Her Life.
Mrs. O. D. Robinson, 43 St. Felix Street, Brooklyn, N. Y., writes: "I have taken Peruna and it did me more good than all my two years' treatment by special physicians. I can really say that I feel like another person. No more swollen feet and limbs. No more bloating of the abdomen. No more shortness of breath. No more stiff and sore joints. You have no idea what your treatment has done for me. It certainly has prolonged my life and made a new woman of me. "O, such a blessing I have received through your kindness, doctor, and the assistance of the medicine which you have so kindly prescribed. I am able to work since I began your treatment, but before I was not able to help myself, much less work for anyone else. All praise is due to Dr. Hartman and his treatment."

My Sister Advised Me to Try Peruna.

I Took Your Treatment and My Appetite Returned Speedily.

I Gained Strength and Flesh and Am in Perfect Health.

I Am So Thankful Your Medicine Has Done Me So Much Good.

—So Says Miss Julia Butler, Of Appleton, Wis.

Sick Headache.
Miss Nettie E. Bogardus, R. F. D. 21, Westfield, N. Y., writes:

"I have been a great sufferer from sick headaches, but am now entirely free from that trouble. I have not felt so well in ten years as I do now."

"I would recommend Peruna and Manalin to all sufferers. I will say, God bless Dr. Hartman and his wonderful remedies."

Weak, No Appetite.
Mrs. Ruth B. Brent, Holmes, Ill., writes:

"I was in poor health three years ago. I kept getting worse, and I finally was so weak that I could not sit up all day. My feet and hands were always cold. I had no appetite."

"I consulted one of the best doctors, who said I could not be cured. I was nervous, my heart would flutter, and I had a pain in my left side and also had chronic constipation."

"I got a bottle of Peruna and one of Manalin and wrote to you for advice. While under your treatment I gained three pounds a month."

"I took several more bottles of Peruna and now I am well. I am able to do all my housework—cooking, washing, ironing, baking and mending."

"Everybody compliments me on looking so much better than I used to, and now I have a girl baby six months old, as fat as she can be."

"She is what I call a Peruna baby, for I know if it had not been for Peruna she would not be here."

For Suffering Women.
Miss Esther Lee, 302 Madison Street, Topeka, Kas., Secretary Triple Tie Social Club, writes:

"Fourteen months ago I began to be troubled with internal catarrh, which left me pale, weak and nervous. I decided to give Peruna a trial."

"To my great relief, I found that my general health improved. I kept growing stronger, and within three months I was in my usual normal condition. I cannot recommend Peruna too highly to suffering women."

A Lawyer's First Lost Case

(Original.)

Myron Woodworth was an attorney just passing middle age. He was known as the lawyer who had never lost a case. Whether this was because he would not take a case that he was not sure of or was so resourceful that his opponents could never defeat him does not appear. The fact remains that until the Yardley case was tried no judge or jury had ever brought a final decision or verdict against him. Upon that case hangs a tale.

Mrs. Yardley died, leaving some $10,000 to a sister, Mrs. Hunt, who had nursed her in her last illness, cutting off her own daughter, Julia Scott, a young married woman living in a different place. Mrs. Scott undertook to break the will on the ground that her aunt had influenced her mother while under the effect of opiates to leave her property to the aunt. No one doubted up to the last moment that Woodworth would win, for he had established every point needed to establish his plea. There was but one more witness to examine, whose testimony was not supposed to be important.

The defendant's counsel called for Margaret Hunt, and the name was repeated by the clerk with no more reverence than he would have spoken the name of a habitual criminal. There was a rustle of woman's dress, and a young girl—she was the daughter of the defendant—passed to the witness stand. Her very appearance begot an unconscious deference in every man in the courtroom.

Woodworth at the moment of her entrance was chatting with a fellow attorney. When he turned his eyes to the witness, he rested upon a vision of loveliness. Not only he, but Judge, jury—indeed, every one in the court—fell under the spell of her presence. In a voice low and sweet she responded to the questions put to her by the defendant's counsel, who elicited from her testimony which if not shaken might yet turn the case against the plaintiff. But those who knew Woodworth did not fear. It was upon cross examination that he was especially strong. Indeed, as he listened to her evidence he saw a weak point that destroyed his value. She had repeated a conversation she had heard between her mother and the testator in which the former urged the latter to leave her property to her daughter, Julia Scott. But the witness had said that she was not in the room and did not see those who were talking.

When Woodworth took the witness for cross examination and asked him his first question a slight tremor passed over the girl, and she cast a quick glance at the judge as if to beseech protection. Then she turned her eyes back on the lawyer, his lip as if to gain courage and submitted herself to be tormented. She did not doubt for a moment that Woodworth would prove her a perjurer.

"Miss Hunt," he said, "how far was the room in which you were when you overheard the conversation you have mentioned from the room in which the conversation occurred?"

A troubled look passed over the face of the witness, and she did not answer the question.

The husband of the testator had been a physician, and his house—the house in which the conversation occurred—was fitted with a speaking tube between the front door and the doctor's bedroom. His widow occupied the bedroom to which the tube led. Miss Hunt, standing at the front door directly before the lower tube mouth awaiting admittance, had heard the conversation through the tube. Woodworth knew this and was prepared to make the statement appear improbable. He might force her to admit that she was not in the house at all, then deny her a chance to tell how she had overheard the conversation.

He stood looking at the girl, who looked at him with all the gentle resourcefulness of a fawn regarding a hunter about to plunge a knife into its throat. Then her eyes became dimmed with tears.

Woodworth's case was lost. All he had to do to win it was to draw out the girl's testimony so as to make it appear to the jury a weak invention. He knew in fact, as well as by her guiltless bearing, that she spoke the truth. At the moment of triumph he gave up victory, gave up his client's case, which he was in duty bound to win.

"Let me see," he said, looking down at some notes he had made on a bit of paper. "Perhaps I can get it in another way."

The other way did not lead to the speaking tube or to anything that would compromise the witness. After asking a number of irrelevant questions he released her from further examination.

Every one wondered. The jury brought in a verdict for the defendant.

Woodworth went from the courtroom to his office, where he wrote a note to his client informing her that the case had been lost through his own fault and inclosing his check for $10,000.

But if the attorney lost the man hoped to gain. Every man has an ideal for his wife. It is seldom that the ideal is realized, but when Woodworth saw Margaret Hunt in the witness stand he recognized something more than he had ever pictured in his imagination. He sought her out and eventually married her. He says that if he lost the case in which she was a witness and $10,000 he won a blessing that no success could equal. Besides, he has made up the pecuniary loss many times over.

A PROMISING LAWYER.

How He Settled a Bill With One of His Many Creditors.

The young lawyer had waited many days for clients, and still they did not come. His bills were mounting higher and higher, and, sad to say, some of his creditors were becoming impatient. At this very minute his tailor, whom he owed for his last winter's overcoat, was sitting beside his desk uttering all sorts of dire threats.

"I'll pay you when I can," he said. "Well, that doesn't satisfy me," retorted the tailor. "What would happen, do you think, if I were to take this matter to the courts and sue you?"

"You'd get judgment, of course," said the young lawyer. "Then, in your opinion, you haven't a leg to stand on," insisted the tailor. "Not a leg," returned the briefless youth.

"Very well, then, I shall proceed at once," said the tailor, rising. "I certainly advise you to," said the lawyer, with a gleam in his eye. "I shall most certainly accept your advice," retorted the tailor sarcastically.

"Good," said the lawyer. "What is the amount of your bill?" "Sixty-eight dollars and fifty cents," said the tailor. "All right," said the lawyer. "Hand over six fifty, please." "Six fifty?" said the tailor. "What for?"

"You have just consulted me in the matter of a suit at law and have stated that you accept my advice. My charge for that is $75, and the $6.50 is the difference between your bill and mine," said the lawyer. "If I don't hear from you by noon tomorrow I shall put the matter in the hands of my attorneys. Good morning, sir."

And the tailor went out marveling much that so ingenious a young gentleman should be a member of the great army of the unemployed.—Harper's Weekly.

An Eye on the Future. Tommy's maiden aunt had called attention to some of that young man's misdemeanors, thereby causing him to be punished. Tommy pondered awhile, then asked, "Papa, will little sister Gladys be an aunt to my children when I am a man?"

"Yes, Tommy," answered his father.

Just as Good.

"We are trying to educate our readers to recognize the evils of substitution," said the business manager of one of the popular magazines. "Through our advertising pages we are trying to get them up to the point where they will insist upon getting what they ask for and will take nothing else. The merchant who has 'something just as good' is no more to be depended upon than a clerk in a certain country store which a friend visited to buy something.

"My friend had been invited unexpectedly to make an automobile trip and was not fully prepared for it. The roads were very dusty, and after traveling several miles the party came to a little country village, where my friend thought he might be able to purchase something to protect his clothing. The automobile halted before the general store of the village. My friend alighted and accosted a drowsy clerk. 'I want to get a linen duster,' he said.

"I am very sorry," said the clerk, "but we are just out of linen dusters. I can let you have a nice feather duster!"

The Wearing of a Watch. At a meeting of the British Watch and Clock Makers' Guild, London, is the better way to keep a watch at night—lying flat or hanging up? was debated. The general opinion was that it was better to lay it flat.

The vice president of the guild said it depended upon the kind of watch. If it were one such as Captain Cook's, some sort of the hanging, the watch should be advised to keep it in one position. It will wear out sooner, but that does not much matter. A good watch should be set at night. The variation of rate between hanging and lying is very small, and the difference is practically negligible, so that the mean rate is constant. In the hanging position all the parts are running on the side bearings, when there is the greatest friction of all, by letting the watch lie flat at night and run on the end bearings, where there is less friction, the wear is diminished and the watch made more durable.

A Light Weight. "Does your wife ever scold you for battering up your pillow these hot nights?"

"No. She compliments me on my neatness. Only yesterday she said my pillow looked as if I scarcely pressed it."

"Well, I guess if I had a less empty as yours my pillow would be the same."—Cleveland Plain Dealer
