Last week "burglars" were attracted to the residences along Jefferson street, between Main and St. Peters streets. The police were summoned and the offender was run to cover. He was a well known man who had indulged too liberally in the flowing bowl, and in consequence had lost his way to his lodgings. The dwellers of the block had their rest broken and were excusable for believing their homes were besieged by a "burglar."

A number of showers and rains have visited this section this week, breaking the protracted succession of droughts, started last winter. The dust of the highways has given place to mud. Some warm nights gave way to a temperature of 66 degrees, accompanied by north winds.
