THE MARTINIQUE CALAMITY.

The calamity of the centuries has happened at St. Pierre, Island of Martinique. On Thursday morning, May 7th, the volcano of Mont Pelee emptied in a fearful manner, and in twenty minutes the whole city of St. Pierre and its shipping was engulfed in the molten sea, literally destroying every living thing and engulfing the property of the city.

Details from the spot, now visited by numerous relief committees, confirm the sickening particulars and show the the populace were roasted or boiled alive in the fiery sea of lava.

The whole civilized world is exercised over this terrible calamity. At the four corners of the earth are wending their way to afford relief to those in the section who escaped. Only in one or two instances, does history record any catastrophe on a scale with this, one in China centuries ago, in which 100,000 lives were lost, also the destruction of Lisbon, Nov. 1, 1755, which destroyed 60,000 lives.

The island Martinique is one of the group of West India Islands about 300 miles Southeast of Port Rico and about 2000 miles from New Orleans and New York, South and Southeast.
