THE PHILIPPINE ISSUE

Senator Carmack in an interview published in yesterday's Commercial appeal claims that he is in no way at odds with the congressional committee on the Philippine question, and that he is by no means alone in his continued opposition to the retention of these islands.

There are many Democrats who are opposed to the annexation of the Philippines, and there are a few who are now opposed to their retention. Those who were opposed to annexation, originally, now realize that whether for good or ill, better or worse it is an irrevocable fact which is an indisputable fact.

The great body of the Democrats want justice done the Philippines, and they want the constitution to follow the flag, but they realize that the flag is in the islands, and that it will remain "put," they realize also that the civil commission has accomplished wonders, and that it is doing all that can be done.

Imperialism can never become a Democratic issue if prudence prevails. Senator Carmack may magnify it and shed the effulgence of his eloquence over it, but he will have few followers among his many admirers.

His Sight Threatened.

"While picketing last month my 11-year-old boy was poisoned by some weed or plant," says W. H. Dibble, of Sims City, Ia. He rubbed the poison off his hands into his eyes and for awhile he was afraid he would lose his sight.

THE NEGRO CONGRESS.

Atlanta, August 8.—The general themes for today's session of the Negro Young People's Christian and Education Congress were missionary questions and the general subject of temperance, and many interesting addresses were delivered by clergymen and educators from all sections of the United States.

The activities of the day began with sunrise prayer meetings held at the various colored universities and seminaries of the city.

"The Conversion of the World" was the general subject considered at the early morning meetings.

In the afternoon the delegates gathered at the various evangelical churches of the city for the discussion of missionary question and other subjects connected with the social and moral advancement of the race.

B. Y. Jones of New Orleans declared that the time had come when it was not for the white man to decide the policy of this country, but for the negro.

"If the white man won't help us, we will make him! It is no longer for the white man to say, it is for the negro to say, and say he will. If the white man does not extend to us the helping hand, we will force him to it.

Mr. Jones also declared in bitter terms that the negro in the South was not given a fair chance and that he must make for himself his position among the people.

Rev. J. A. Bray of Athens, Ga., in his speech on the good of secret societies among the negro race, said that if the white man would co-operate with the negro in lawfully executing criminals and hunting them down, the negro would go to the very mouth of hell to protect the women of this country.

IN MEMORIAM.

"Twilight and evening star, And one clear call for me, And may there be no mourning on the bier When I lie out to sea."

From her beautiful home in the mountains of Tennessee, at Rugby, on Friday morning August 1st, Mrs. Sarah Pomeroy, beloved wife of Frederick O. Wellman, passed on to her reward.

She had been ailing for several days, under the care of her physician, with no suggestion of serious results. Her husband and two daughters were at her bedside when the Master came and called for her, and she arose and went out quietly, leaving her dear ones stunned by the suddenness of this irreparable loss.

Mrs. Wellman was born in Pomeroy, Ohio, a place of considerable importance, but which her grandfather, Samuel Wyllys Pomeroy of Boston, bought when it was called "wild western land."

Mrs. Wellman's mother was Elizabeth Washington, daughter of Thomas Worthington, who came from Virginia into Ohio before that state government was organized. He was one of the earliest settlers, when such distinction meant brain and character, not merely political influence.

Mrs. Wellman was a lovely representation of many generations of thorough culture, with a wonderfully spiritualized beauty of heart, mind and soul, all her own.

To warm, to comfort and yet command; And yet, a spirit still and bright, With something of angelic light."

Mrs. Wellman was educated in Boston. Thirty years ago she married Mr. Fred O. Wellman of Boston, and together they made an extensive journey through the old world. Mr. Wellman having lived and traveled abroad for many years was enabled to select the most interesting places, and in every respect make the trip so delightful that the pleasant memory was a joy throughout their lives.

Mrs. Wellman was a devoted member of the Episcopal church, as most of her family are and have been. She was a woman of high intelligence, and in society was a strong power for good. She absorbed the principles of the great Kindergarten Froebel in their highest sense considering the care of a little child with its wonderful body and spiritless soul the greatest responsibility that could come into a human life.

Her gentle patience and unflinching wisdom and called her blessed, and her husband also, and he praiseth her." Several years ago Mr. and Mrs. Wellman traveled through the South seeking a desirable climate. They spent some time in New Iberia, where they made many friends. Later on they found a charming spot in the mountains of Tennessee.

A number of cultured English people from the old college town of Rugby had settled there. The climate proved beneficial in many respects. Mrs. Wellman at once interested herself in the church and in Sunday school, sending such kindness and blessing all who came within her influence. And so, when like a tired child, she closed her eyes and fell asleep, all the people seemed to vie with each other in showing their affection and honoring her memory. The town bell was muffled and tolled to express public sorrow. Her last resting place was a couch of roses, and all that loving hearts and hands could do, was done to comfort the sorrowing hearts of her dear ones, who stood, as it were, still gazing up into Heaven to which she had passed out of their sight. There was no drapery of black in that loved blessed home, from which the very heart and center of all its joy had gone. For the dear wife and mother always emphasized the fact "that to put on immortality and be received into the Father's house, into the place prepared for us, was the blessed privilege of God's children."

Bandit Tracy took eleven men with him, or sent them ahead of him, before closing his account. He suggested that his friends did not put an end to him before the date of his own self-destruction. We must revise our opinion of the bravery of the West. The various posers in pursuit of Tracy seemed afraid to approach him, and took it out in shooting at him from long range. It is not probable that he would have lasted quite so long had he Southern posers to deal with.

ADJOURNED MEETING POLICE JURY. NEW IBERIA, LA., Aug. 14, 1902. Pursuant to adjournment the Police Jury convened this day with President Britain in the chair and all the members present, except Mr. Deleambre.

By Mr. Deleambre, the following Parish Board of Health was appointed: Dr. W. J. Emmer, Fred. Decout and Edmond Deleambre.

On motion of Mr. Decout, duly carried, the Jury then resolved itself into a live stock sanitary commission and adopted the following resolution: Resolved, that in view of the report that cholera is prevailing in the Parishes of Vermilion and Lafayette, the Parish Health Officer is hereby directed to quarantine against the above parishes and to further adopt all precautionary measures necessary to prevent the introduction of the disease in this Parish.

MIND VS. MUSCLE.

There never was a truer or more homely maxim than that all work and no play makes Jack a dull boy."

A prominent building contractor of Galveston earnestly resisted a demand for a reduction of working hours by the carpenters; but after the eight-hour day was fairly tested, the contractor declared in a signed article that the men did more and better work in eight hours than they had been doing in nine.

It is also true that farmers or many of them, work too hard and for many hours. While at work the mind is centered on the task in hand, and at the end of a long and tedious day of labor, both body and mind are tired and must have a rest. It is evident that hard work during long hours is incompatible with the mental freedom that ought to guide and control the laborer.

Why should a man carry about with him a head pumped or watermelon would do as well. But the head and its wonderfully complicated mechanism, and almost divine power, was bestowed, not as an ornamental appendage, but to be used incessantly in directing the labor of the hands, and in devising better methods by which a nearer road to success than that of "main strength and awkwardness" may be discovered.

If a farmer would take more time to think it would not be necessary to spend so much sweat and energy in earning a living. They should have recreation, amusement, social enjoyments, and all those things that go to make life worth living. Without these the farmer is no better than the slave and but little better than the convict on a state farm.

The plea is often made that there is no time for these things, and cannot be lost a day when they would use the labor-saving implements within their reach and strong teams, they could do the week's work in four days, and do it better. It is often the case that more than one-half the time can be saved. Two old farmers were discussing a neighbor who had moved in two years before.

"I don't see how he can take time to go to picnics and attend to his crop," said Farmer Wilson.

"Well you know it is, he's so contented lazy he's always studying some way to save work—don't work only when he has to," replied Farmer Smith.

"But," said Wilson, "his crop's the best I've seen." "Yes," said Smith, "he seems to have better luck than the rest of us." Smith and Wilson, for we knew them both, always had "bad luck," worked themselves to death, and left farms to their children wouldn't farm. Industries? Of course they were. Saving? They would have been, but they never had a surplus to save. Lived long? Yes, and died in poverty.—Farm and Ranch.

Men Will Be Boys. In the excitement of a lively regatta like boat racing or ball playing, they will strain their muscles and go home limping and sore. Then they have Pury's Pain-Expeller on hand to soothe the quivering nerves, to penetrate the muscles with warmth and healing power. It has relieved the pain of two generations of Americans. Large bottles 25 and 50¢.

...Save Your Hair...

Nine times out of ten there is no need of baldness. There's plenty of warning; hair loses lustre, begins falling, and gradually increases. The time to decide whether or not you care to be bald is when these symptoms show themselves.

LEE'S HAIR TONIC

is a reliable and effective remedy. It will not grow hair on a bald spot; but where the hair has fallen out and a spark of life remains in the roots, growth will be quickened and stimulated. This remedy vitalizes the roots, tones the scalp, stops the falling out, hastens the growing in.
