THE FIRST BITE.
"Oh, Elsie, give me a bite of your apple!" begged a little girl of her schoolmate.
"No," Elsie answered. "I owe Frances the first bite."
"Never mind!" coaxed the other. "Frances isn't here! She can have the second."
The small maid shook her head decidedly. "You never can tell how much will be left when it gets to going," she said. "I owe the first bite to Frances, and she'll have it. I'll give you the next," she added generously.
"I guess Frances won't leave much," the other pouted. "Think you're real mean!"
But the honest owner of the little red apple kept to the thorny path of integrity, and Frances had "the first bite."

A subscription paper was presented to a merchant. He was known to be a promoter of the cause for which the money was wanted, and a generous sum expected from him. As he glanced over the list of donors, he saw the names of several who were in his debt, and for whom only the day before his collector had returned with empty pockets. The sum of fifty dollars stood opposite one signature; another man was pledged for seventy-five. His mind ran over his present bank account. In justice to his employees and his family, he could not spare a cent outside. His wife was in urgent need of a winter cloak, his children must have new shoes and warmer clothing; he was averse to running in debt. With a troubled face, he returned the paper to the waiting woman.
"I am very sorry," he said. "But I cannot see my way clear to giving anything just now. I could not do it without depriving others of what is rightfully theirs."
The woman frowned her disapproval. "I had counted on your sympathy," she said, "for I had supposed you were in strong sympathy with me;" and she proceeded to set forth the urgent needs of her society, and the privilege of donating to so worthy an object.
The man listened patiently, but at the end his reply was substantially the same that it had been at first, and the woman bowed herself out, a disagreeable curl on her lips.
The evening papers made prominent note of the man who had "subscribed so liberally" to the city's pet charity. The merchant whose man was not there smiled grimly to himself at his reflections.
He knew that he was undoubtedly being denounced that night as a stingy man, while the money that rightfully belonged to him, and in the possession of which he would have been glad to sign his name to that paper for a considerable sum, was credited to those others.

All this brings us to the question. When are we entitled to the privilege of giving? As long as we are in debt, have we any moral right to give, of that which is in our possession? We must have the necessities of life, or we might never be able to pay that which we owe; but it is a nice question to decide how far those necessities should go. Shall we indulge in pudding for dinner, while our washerwoman—whose bill we have not paid—sits down to a meal of only butterless bread and potatoes? Certainly it cannot be honest to take that poor woman's money and give it in support of even a most worthy charity. Would that be less than an actual theft?
For the person in debt there is always somebody who is entitled to "the first bite," and just who that may be every debtor must decide for himself.

Business for the week was on holiday lines, some inquiry from those who are "always at it" but buyers as a rule, have shown a disposition to throw orders over until after the Fourth. Prices are steady and assortments fairly good; the extreme of the market being in less beautiful supply, holders are more strenuous in seeking full value, and buyers are less critical in their demands for quality and price.

Night Was Her Terror.
"I would cough nearly all night long," writes Mrs. Chas. Applegate, of Alexandria, Ind., "and could hardly get any sleep. I had consumption so bad that if I walked a block I would cough frightfully and spit blood, but, when all other medicines failed, three $1.00 bottles of Dr. King's New Discovery wholly cured me and I gained 58 pounds." It's absolutely guaranteed to cure Coughs, Colds, La Grippe, Bronchitis, all Throat and Lung Troubles. Price 50c and $1.00. Trial bottles free at Estorce Drug Co.

Some seer of the nineteenth century predicted that the beginning of the twentieth century would be marked by many awful calamities. He was a prophet of evil, but he evidently had inside information, for there have been a number of terrible disasters, the horror of which have shocked the whole civilized world. This year we have had three great disasters. The first to send a thrill of horror through out the world was the Iroquois theatre holocaust in Chicago. Two weeks ago the excursion steamer General Slocum burned in New York harbor, and nearly a thousand women and children perished. Sunday last the steamer Norge, conveying 800 emigrants from the Baltic to America, struck a rock, and went down with 700 of them. And on top of it all we have the war in the east, where every few days a thousand or more men are killed in some engagement on land or sea. And this is era of civilization.—Baton Rouge Times.

The advantage Chiffage has over the numerous chill tonics is that it contains not only the alkaloidal Quinine treatment in a tasteless form, but all the other medicines which are anti-malarial. In taking this remedy in its palatable form you practically get the benefit of all the combined chill tonics in use. Again a great many hard Quinine Pills and Capsules pass through the stomach and bowels undigested, whereas Chiffage is soluble and readily absorbed by the most delicate stomach, and if taken according to directions, you come under the influence of it before the next expected chill, which is the most important factor, when it is understood that chill number three of the congestive type is of the most serious consequences, even if it does not actually prove fatal. So you can readily see the importance of having a mixture that contains all the Anti-Malarial drugs, and in a form that is absorbed by the stomach immediately so as to prevent the recurrence of the next Malarial Paroxysm.

A young man who contemplated matrimony was hesitating about making a choice between two young ladies. One of them could play on the piano to beat the band, but when it came to cooking a meal or making a cake, she would not grade above 40 per cent. The other didn't know how to play Yankee Doodle, but she could cook a meal that would make a man hungry just to look at it. Finally the young fellow asked the advice of an old man who had been married a great many years and had picked up a good bit of information as he came down the pike. "Young fellow," said the old man, "my observation is that as a man gets older he gradually loses interest in pianos, but the older he gets the more particular his stomach becomes. If you take my advice you will provide for the future of your stomach and take your chances in getting enough music on the outside to satisfy your taste for melody."

Catarth Cannot be Cured with LOCAL APPLICATIONS, as they cannot reach the seat of the disease. Catarth is a blood or constitutional disease, and in order to cure it you must take internal remedies. Hall's Catarth Cure is taken internally, and acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces. Hall's Catarth Cure is not a quick medicine. It was prescribed by one of the best physicians in this country for years and is a regular prescription. It is composed of the best tonics known, combined with the best blood purifiers, acting directly on the mucous surfaces. The perfect combination of the two ingredients is what produces such wonderful results in curing Catarth. Send for testimonials free.
