At a meeting of the Women's Civic League, on Monday last, it was decided to omit the sex designation from the club name, as several prominent men had given their endorsement of the movement by expressing a desire to become associate members. The Club will in future be known as The Civic League, of New Iberia. The object of the organization is the betterment of the town in every direction towards which a woman may work. To stimulate a spirit of civic pride among our people. To render moral and material aid and encouragement to the town authorities in any and all measures inaugurated for the improvement of the town. It is proposed to organize auxiliaries among the children in the public and private schools. Children early trained in civic virtues cannot fail to develop into good citizens. This is of vital importance in the education of every child, boy or girl. The next meeting of the League will be held at the City Hall, on Monday, October 10th, at 4:30 P. M., when it is hoped that every section of New Iberia will be represented by several active members.

THE ST. LOUIS FAIR.

Some time ago Rev. J. M. Henry promised to tell New Iberia folks what he saw in Jerusalem, for some reason he did not. So we concluded to come and see for ourselves. So here we are, in a city whose narrow streets make even Iberia and Julia streets look like roadways. A camel with his swaying gait when loaded is liable to touch on either side. Here and there are wider spaces, (called market places) where donkeys and camels stand ready to be hired for riding and burden bearing. Camels frequently called "the ships of the desert" because, no doubt their peculiar gait will make a novice riding them as sea sick as a trip on the ocean-wave. Jerusalem is no longer in the hands of the Jews. The Temple, for so long its center and glory, is now but a mass of ruin. The gold and gems which formed so large a part of this, the greatest building the world has ever known, having been removed ages ago, and over the principal part of the site is built the celebrated Mosque of Omar, a marvelous piece of Mohammedan Architecture. There is a street called David, and one called straight in contradistinction to the rest of them being so crooked. The merchants display their rather gaudy ware in open windows or more frequently on large trays or mats upon the pavements in front of their dwellings. The doors generally opening flush upon the street disclose a narrow trundle stairs soon lost to sight. No wonder the story tells of "letting a sick man down from the house top," they could never carry a full grown sick or well man down such a stairs, Jerusalem has no gas or electric lights at night, it is as dark as a stack of black cats, or to some nearer home, New Iberia. The people having been accustomed to that state of affairs, provide themselves with graceful little lamps, very much in shape like a gosling, the neck being the handle. In all cases of evening entertainment provident people not only fill their lamps but have a very convenient vessel for carrying more oil, (now entre nous would it not be a good idea for us to try the Jerusalem plan rather than stumble around in the dark?) We had the privilege of seeing a marriage ceremony, which was unique in every detail. The selection is attended to by the parents of both parties; all arrangements monetary so settled. When the young people meet the groom lifts the veil from the face of his bride, seeing her for the first time. He then takes his sword from the scabbard with considerable flourish and swings it in front of the bride as though promising to protect her from all the world, she takes it and rests her cheek upon it, thereby accepting his protection. He presents the bride with a long peculiar tassel-like affair formed of small silver coins. This is a hereditary gift which must be guarded most sacredly. It was a piece of this silver no doubt of which the Good Book tells, the "woman who lost it" swept the house diligently until she found it. A loss of this kind could not be endured and respectively maintained. We also saw an illustration of the Syrian method of greeting in the streets. There is a great deal of courtesy. They enquire affectionately for each and every member of the family, at each name bowing until the forehead touches, sometimes with considerable force, hand shaking continuing all the while. It is not without a peculiar grace, but one should have no other occupation if they had many friends and were given to going about. No wonder Christ told his disciples when he sent them out to preach. "To greet no man by the way." It would take all their time if they were very polite. There is a beautiful picture set in concave form to give the best perspective, showing the encampment of the children of Israel on their historic march. A beautiful illustrative of the Ark-of the-Covenant with its ever-burning symbol of Divinity and the pillar of fire directly over the Holy Place. While gazing at this instructive and beautiful picture a finely cultivated voice told the story of the Holy City, accompanied by a fine organ and aided by exquisite videscopic views. A group of little children sang and "we heard the voice of Angels from Heaven in answer ring." The beautiful celestial beings floated up and down before us as seeming to sing with voices tuned in Heaven. A delightful delusion which we much enjoyed.

We stood beside the heavy stone wall in a turning place of the street where the Jews still wall the departed glory of their once glorious city. It is no wonder. When one realizes the magnificence of the past and the desolation of the present. The Jews as a people are about the most prosperous in the world, and instead of one land to love and enjoy, they are welcome citizens in all the civilized nations of the Earth. As you wonder over the sacred ground you are surprised. We think of the Garden of Gethsemane as a beautiful verdant spot as in the days long since. It is now dry and barren, not a tree under such a sorrow laden Christ could rest while communing with his Father. A distinguished lecturer said: "The best place from which to view Jerusalem was from the top of Olivet." But where are the olive trees which gave this slight elevation its name? The valley of Kedron has no suggestion of its former fertility. There is a painfully realistic representation of the crucifixion in a wayside chapel, and a more cherry picture of the Ascension. A Syrian guide points out to you many things you must take on faith. The Manger with the Blessed Babe and Virgin Mother and the wise men presenting their gifts, gold, to their King. Frankincense to their God and Myrrah for burial. The borrowed tombs of Joseph is shown where worshipping pilgrims have so defaced the stone by chipping that a slab of marble had to be put over the original stone for its protection. The Arch is shown where the Christ fainted under his heavy load and Simon came forward to lift his wooden burden, but the weight of humanity's sins and sorrows to man took from Him. 1904 years ago Jerusalem and all the neighboring country was the wonder of then known world for its fertility, its scenic beauty of hill and dale, its fresh springs and lovely rivers, the wealth and intelligence of the people. The magnificence of Solomon's Temple is still the marvel of the world. Nothing has ever approached its gorgeous beauty. You feel as moving through the now desolated land like a ghost of two thousand years, just awaking before the trumpet call. 'Tis a weird and odd experience. The curious commingling of Moslems and Jews and Christians not in harmony by any means, (but sorry to say) the Christians fight each other and the Moslems step in to keep the peace. Small lattice windows overlook the streets through which the women can see without being seen. There is so much to see and so much to think and study about afterwards, that the journey is well worth the effort. One should understand the most important events in the past, and the spirit of true living better for this glimpse into the olden times so replete with sacred history. If Rev. J. M. Henry saw anything in Jerusalem that we did not mention, we wish he would promptly come and tell us all about it.

The New York Tribune says: "The presence of the Japanese army there on stage in its march to Mukden lifts the name of Bentsin-pudza into attention for the first time in the campaign, and a more ten-cornered gazetteering appellation has not risen out of the geographical fog wrapping the Corea and Manchurian expanses since the fighting, advancing and retreating in those regions began."
