Maud Adams, the actress is said to have undergone an operation for appendicitis and still lives. Generally, "the operation is successful—and the patient dies." and there are some physicians who, knowing the popular craze at the present time for surgical operations as a cure for the many "ills that flesh is heir to"—for appendicitis in particular—and the folly of it, advise against it; and if the advice is rejected, they make an incision which deceives but satisfies the patient and then proceed to heal it up, the appendicitis infection being cured another way.—States.

Deep tearing or wrenching pains, occasioned by getting wet through; when at rest, or on first moving the limbs and in cold or damp weather, is cured quickly by Ballard's Snow Liniment. If it is true that the Russian volunteer fleet steamers Dnieper and Rion, both of which sneaked out of the Black Sea on the pretense that they were merchant vessels, and had guns and ammunition put aboard in the Mediterranean, were ordered, after the capture and release of the British steamer Malacca, not to interfere any further with foreign shipping, they will either be treated as pirates or will get their government into further trouble by the sinking of the British steamer St. Kilda in the China Sea. However it will not be long before the Japanese get the news of their doing, and—well, the rest can be guessed.

Hubbard Temple, Texas, writes, "I have used Herbine for the past two years. It has done me more good than all the doctors. It is the best medicine ever made for chills and fever."—Soc.

An ever correspondent of the Shreveport Times, in answering the excuse of the Times for mobs, used the following language: "It is unfortunately true that men of wealth and influence, or whose families are wealthy or influential, sometimes escape at the hands of juries. But such cases have no part in this discussion, because the mob never concerns itself with the task of punishing the wealthy or powerful criminal. Its victim is always the poor and friendless and helpless creature whom there is no danger in tackling at."

Washington Letter

President Roosevelt has started the diplomatic world by his frank identical note to Russia and Japan in which he expressed in terms regarded as extraordinarily forceful for the language of diplomacy, his urgent desire that peace between the belligerents in the present war be concluded. It is generally assumed that the President, as a result of his extensive communications with both the Czar and Mikado, conducted through the United States Ambassador to St. Petersburg and the Japanese Minister to Washington, was assured that such an appeal would be welcomed by both nations. In fact no other hypothesis would account for the publication of the precise language of the appeal.

The President feels that the time has come when in the interest of all mankind he must endeavor to see if it is not possible to bring to an end the terrible and lamentable conflict now being waged, says the President and further along he says, "The President accordingly urges the Russian and Japanese Governments not only for their own sakes, but in the interest of the whole civilized world, to open direct negotiations for peace with another." While the note in its entirety is respectfully commended to the President, it is pointed out in diplomatic parlance the expression "urge" is particularly strong and would ordinarily be replaced by such an expression as "hope for" etc.

The effort of the President to secure direct negotiations rather than further to act as intermediary will prove a relief to many who have watched the negotiations with little anxiety fearing that Japan to insure good faith on the part of Russia an insurance which the President would certainly be powerless to give, especially without the sanction of Congress. If the belligerents act upon the president's appeal there will undoubtedly be added another triumph to the administration of Theodore Roosevelt.

The Moroccan situation is beginning to attract considerable attention, although somewhat overshadowed by the peace negotiations. Germany has issued an invitation to all the powers signed in the Convention of Madrid, negotiated in 1880, to attend an international conference to take steps to preserve the open door in Morocco and as the United States signed that convention it is invited to the new conference. Moreover, the President's representative to this conference, although by so doing he would run the risk of seriously offending both Great Britain and France, especially the latter. It will be remembered that France and Great Britain negotiated a treaty whereby the former guaranteed the open door in Morocco for thirty years and when the treaty had been duly signed its contents were communicated to Germany. Immediately thereafter, Emperor William and his plans to go to the Mediterranean and touch at Morocco. While there or soon after he had been there and as a supposed sequel to his visit the Sultan rejected the proposals of the French foreign Minister M. Delcasse. Now the Emperor calls an international conference to discuss the work of France and Great Britain and do it over again along lines that will give Germany a hand in the affair. With all this the United States is, of course, little concerned, but it is a matter of regret to conservative Americans that the President should entangle this country in the affair. The plea on which the President will act will be the protection of the foreign trade interests of this country, but as the United States sold to Morocco during the last fiscal year less than the worth of goods the plea is obviously somewhat speciously.

Considerable interest is manifested in what is termed here the peaceful revolution of Norway against the rule of Sweden. The particular attention which attaches to Washington being due to the fact that it resulted in the return of Minister Grip who was popular in the national capital. Minister Grip is a Norwegian and will, it is supposed, resign from the diplomatic service of Sweden when he is returned to the Swedish capital. The outcome of the revolution is also looked for with interest especially as it seems possible that Norway may establish a republic following the lines of the United States, and it is hoped with some modern improvements. Arrangements are practically complete for the trip of Secretary Taft to the Philippines and it is regarded as noteworthy that few members of Congress of any particular standing, especially in the Republican party, will make the journey. There are few of the more prominent Democrats, but the leading Republicans in both houses of Congress are conspicuous by their absence. The reason of this is not easily explained, although it is said that the older men of the parties regard the trip as too extensive and arduous to permit of their undertaking it. If the judgment of prominent Republicans is to be accepted the President has run up the white flag before the assembly of the stand patters and will adjourn Congress in special session next fall. The stand patters have been insisting that there would be no extra session for some time but recently Senator Hansbrough, after a long talk with the President came out and told the newspapers that he believed that the stand patters had won. Senator Hansbrough is one of those Republicans who believes as did the President a short time ago, that the people are being robbed by the tariff schedules which require revision. Moreover, the Senator is standing by his colors and is likely to have a hard time explaining to his constituents next campaign why the President did not do so.
