

After The Grippe

"I am most pleased, to be able to write and thank you for what Cardui has done for me," writes Mrs. Sarah J. Gilliland, of Siler City, N. C.

"Last February, I had the Grippe, which left me in bad shape. Before that, I had been bothered with female trouble, for ten years, and nothing seemed to cure it.

"At last, I began to take Cardui. I have taken only three bottles, but it has done me more good than all the doctors or than any other medicine I ever took."

Take CARDUI

The Woman's Tonic

For the after-effects of any serious illness, like the Grip, Cardui is the best tonic you can use.

It builds strength, steadies the nerves, improves the appetite, regularizes irregularities and helps bring back the natural glow of health.

Cardui is your best friend, if you only know it. Think of the thousands of ladies whom Cardui has helped! What could possibly prevent it from helping you?

Remember you cannot get the benefit of the Cardui ingredients in any other medicine, for they are not for sale in any drug store except in the Cardui bottle. Try Cardui.

LAKE SHRIMP.

Lake Shrimp, the great delicacy of the Gulf and one of the far-famed Gumbo, has recently been given a great deal of attention. In the early days of the State's history, shrimp fishermen brought the delectable morsel to the markets for home consumption only. Later, the Chinese and Malay fishermen caught and dried the shrimp afterwards shipping them to the countries of the Far East, while canneries located at various points in the State can the product and ship them to the markets of the world.

Always the demand has been increasing with the natural result that the supply has been diminishing. Men interested in the problem in various ways, have tried to obtain protection for these crustaceans, but generally the efforts have been defeated. Those engaged in this conservation work always anticipate opposition from the fishermen who seem to be unable to understand that the secret of the increase of this valuable natural resource is through protection of the females during the breeding season.

This opposition is one of the strangest features of the whole protective problem. Here is a class of citizens who have followed this livelihood for 3 or 4 generations and all they have to show after all these years of toil is dire poverty, distress and deprivation of everything that other citizens term necessities.

The last General Assembly gave a great deal of consideration to the subject and finally enacted a law Act No. 245 of 1910, which protects "lake shrimp" during 6 weeks of the 10 weeks of the breeding season. Even this small measure of protection was assailed by the fishermen, and to cap the climax, the Good Government League in their platform demand the repeal of "Foolish restrictions on the catch and sale of shrimp, (meaning thereby lake shrimp), which do not breed in our water."

This declaration that lake shrimp do not breed here is made in the face of the scientific fact that every female lake shrimp found in our bays and lakes between the 15th day of May and the 15th day of July carries in her egg sac anywhere from 5000 to 30,000 mature eggs, the larger portion of which would hatch out and become young shrimp and later on a marketable edible and valuable commodity.

There are 16 species of shrimp found in the waters of the State only 4 of which are of any importance. The first is of course the "Lake Shrimp," scientifically known as "Penaeus setiferus," the largest and most important species, commercially, found in our waters.

The next is the "River Shrimp" (Bathynatona) smaller than the lake shrimp, but more highly prized on account of the delicate flavored flesh. It is found principally in the Mississippi River.

"Grass Shrimp" (Palaeomonetes carolinensis) a small species found lurking among the weeds and grasses bordering the bays and smaller streams along the coast. It is a salt or brackish water form and seldom becomes as large as the River shrimp.

The so-called "King Shrimp" (Chloridella empusa) is not a shrimp, but rather a distant relative of them. It is included here for the reason the fishermen often catch large quantities of them and erroneously say that they are the male of the lake shrimp.

Habits of the Lake Shrimp. Shrimp are shy, active animals, which are constantly moving about from place to place, frequently found in large "schools." Lake Shrimp are found only near the coast, and seldom, if ever, enters fresh water. On account of their extreme timidity, it is very difficult to make observations on their habits—or even to keep track of their movements.

Anatomical Description. Although this form is very well known to the fishermen along the coast and in the markets, it is necessarily more unfamiliar to those residing in the interior parishes of the State. For that reason, as well as to render the more technical references understandable a brief description of some of the main anatomical features will be necessary.

The body is very much compressed, giving an extremely slender appearance. It is covered with a firm, tough outer skin, or shell, which corresponds to that of the common market crab, although it never becomes as hard and firm as it does in the latter form. The body is composed of two main regions, the anterior head region and the posterior tail or abdomen. The latter is composed of several similar rings or segments. In the body part, this ring-like structure (or segmentation) is more or less obscured by the large shield-like carapace, which covers the back and sides, and is continued anteriorly as a long, serrated spine, the rostrum.

The Female Reproductive Organs consists of an egg-gland or ovary, which lies in the dorsal part of the body cavity a short distance in front of the posterior end of the carapace. It consists of a central, ring-like portion (composed of partly used halves), from which finger-like processes are sent out on all sides. The anterior and lateral processes are short and rather small, but the posterior part are long and slender extending the entire length of the abdomen. In this gland, the eggs are formed and matured and are then discharged from the body through a pair of slender oviducts, which open through the basal segments of the last pair of chela legs.

Egg Laying Habits. In the majority of the shrimp family, the female carries the eggs during their development attached to the under side of the abdomen. The group of shrimp to which the "Lake Shrimp" belongs (Penaeidae), however, differs from the others in this respect by reason of the fact that the eggs are carried on the back under the shell like covering or carapace, immediately adjacent to the head. The eggs are merely set free into the water and allowed to shift for themselves during development. This means that they are at the mercy of the currents in the water or may fall easy prey to any of the predaceous forms living in those regions. On this account many more eggs are produced by each female that would be in those forms which protect the eggs by carrying them during the early development. The eggs are also rather small and undergo their early development floating around at the surface of the water.

Life History. The period of growth in the egg is very short in this form and the young hatches out in a very immature condition. The larval shrimp has an oval body, but three pairs of appendages, and a single, median eye—and is now called a nauplius. The majority of shrimp pass through this stage while still in the egg. The young shrimp is now capable of making feeble movements and can in a measure direct its course.

As already mentioned, the shrimp is covered with a hard firm covering the exoskeleton. As this is a tough, unyielding layer it is necessary to get rid of it from time to time in order that growth may take place. This is done by the shedding of this coat, which is known as moulting, at which time the outer covering of the body is sloughed off as a thin layer, retaining the external shape of the body.

On this account we find that growth takes place by a series of steps or jumps and not in a regular, imperceptible manner—as is the case with so many animals. The actual enlargement of the body of the shrimp takes place almost immediately after the shedding of the skin, so that a short time after the moult one would hardly believe that the shrimp could have but recently occupied the cast skin.

It has been computed that the average growth per year is one inch. In other words, the lake shrimp usually found in the market averaging 4 to 6 inches in length are from 4 to 6 years of age.

A description of lake shrimp without a recipe for "Gumbo" would be so wanting in that fitness of things essential to real gastronomy, that one is attached herewith.

GUMBO SOUP.—6 large crabs, 1 lb of shrimp (about 18 or 20), 3 dozen crabs (sliced fine), 1 large cup of tomatoes (cut up fine), 1 large onion (cut up fine), 1-2 clove of garlic (minced), 3 or 4 springs of parsley (minced), 2 bay leaves, 1 small spring thyme, 1 red pepper (remove the seeds).

Put lard in large soup pot, and when boiling hot add flour, brown slightly and then add onion and garlic, then the crabs, quartered, then the okra, sliced very fine, then the tomatoes, parsley, bay leaves, etc., lastly the shrimp. Let all stew together for at least twenty minutes, stirring constantly to avoid scorching. Add two quarts of hot water and simmer for at least an hour. When done add salt to taste. Serve with a spoonful of boiled rice in each plate. Ample for six or seven people.

Some persons never serve Gumbo without ham. If used, cut up a slice fine and fry in lard before the addition of the flour. If "file" is used instead of okra, add a tablespoon just before serving, after letting it come to a good boil. A pound of veal (cut in small pieces) is also added to the above recipe by many.

Mr. Tony Fabacher, celebrated Restaurateur of New Orleans, says that Gumbo to be good, must simmer not less than six hours.—W. N. Miller.

Chiggers and Mosquitoes

Are now in their glory—their business is good and they are happy. There is no earthly use of your letting them chew on you, however, if you don't like their ways. A little Hunt's Lightning Oil applied to exposed parts will keep them off, and immediately relieve the irritation caused by their bites. Rub a little on and see for yourself.

WHAT I BELIEVE IN.

I believe in the stuff I am handing out, in the firm I am working for, and in my ability to get results. I believe that honest stuff can be past out to honest men by honest methods. I believe in working, not weeping; in boosting, not knocking; and the pleasure of my job. I believe that a man gets what he goes after, that one deed done today is worth two tomorrow, and that no man is down and out until he has lost faith in himself. I believe in today and the work I am doing, in tomorrow and the work I am going to do, and in the sure reward which the future holds. I believe in courtesy, in generosity, in good cheer, in friendship and in honest competition. I believe there is something, somewhere, for every man ready to do it. I believe I am ready right now!—Elbert Hubbard.

SLOW TO ACTION.

There is supposed to be about one hundred and fifty newspapers in this State. Thus far only about twenty have declared their preferences in the pending political contest. Conditions are so complicated, the aspirants so numerous and the occasion fraught with such grave responsibilities that the quill drivers are weighing the situation carefully before making the final steps.

For instance we find Michael Sanders who is bitterly opposed to the Senators; Hall men who are mum in regard to the Senators; As well people who are at a loss how to select so that it will not hurt their men.

We suppose that every newspaper has a chance, and as there is ample time to make it known we must not find it strange that so few have stepped in the open. We rather believe that in less than two months every one of them will have formed his own ticket and then we will hear plain talk.—Marksville Enterprise.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable, coming has been discovered to be a constitutional disease, and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only Constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circular and book free. Address F. J. LAND OFFICE ASPIRANT.

Editor Enterprise: I presume that you are aware that I am a candidate for the position of Register of the State Land Office in the coming Democratic primary, and I write to ask that you give me your earnest support in my candidacy. If elected I know that you and your friends will not be disappointed in the work that I will accomplish for the people and the State of Louisiana.

For nearly ten years I was Receiver of Public Moneys of the United States Land Office at New Orleans, La., having been appointed by the late President Cleveland, and ever since I have devoted myself to the practice of land laws. I am familiar not only with the United States land laws, but with the Acts of Congress relating to the public lands granted to the State of Louisiana. I am thoroughly acquainted with plats of survey and Land Office records, and I will endeavor to push vigorously the selections and approvals of the swamp lands to which our State is entitled.

By plats of survey of the Surveyors General of the United States and their deputies, the area of land surface in the surface, in the State of Louisiana is estimated at 29,661,760 acres. According to the reports of the Interior Department the surveyed lands in the State amount to 27,176,996 acres, remaining unsurveyed Jan. 1, 1911, 1,884,764 acres.

The Swamp and overflowed lands in the State of Louisiana rendered thereby unfit for cultivation were granted to the State of Louisiana by Acts of March 2, 1849 and Sept. 28, 1850. These grants were in present and operated as to their respective dates to invest the State of Louisiana with equitable title to all such lands which remained unsold at the date of the Acts. The swamp land acts were passed 61 and 62 years ago and the Government has not as yet approved or patented all of the lands. In fact the State has not as yet made all its selections under the grants.

The Interior Department has greatly neglected the State of Louisiana. It has at this time more than 1,884,764 acres yet unsurveyed, and I, among many other citizens, believe that the United States Government should finally adjust the State's claims, and that surveys should be made by the United States Government and that the State should be allowed to make selections of all lands coming under the swamp land grants. In addition to this the State of Louisiana is entitled to indemnity for a number of acres of land, and this question, which lays dormant in the Interior Department, should be agitated. Should I be the choice of the people as Register of the State Land Office, I expect to revive this question.

All of the lands in the State of Mississippi, Alabama and Arkansas have been surveyed by the United States Government, and these respective States have been granted the lands given them under Special Acts, and each of these States had more land area than Louisiana. I think it is high time that the State of Louisiana should be given her just dues, and my greatest efforts and endeavors would be to that effect. This question is one of vital importance to the people of the State and should be handled by one with expert knowledge in land matters.

Yours truly,
CHARLES P. JOHNSTON.

S.S.S. PERMANENTLY HEALS OLD SORES

If a quantity of normal blood is placed in a vessel and vigorously whipped with a bunch of twigs, a white, sticky substance is found clinging to the twigs and binding them together. This is a natural element of the circulation and is known as plasma, a fibrous constituent—and is the true healing quality of the blood. This plasma property is frequently destroyed by impure accumulations in the blood, and this vital fluid not only loses its power to heal, but becomes a source of irritation to any wound or open sore or ulcer on the flesh. Continually the blood discharges the impurities into the place and gradually the infection spreads and the sore enlarges. The nutritive

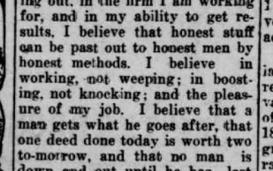

I was suffering greatly from a sore on my left breast, which had begun to eat, and at times deep, absorbing pain would pass through it. I consulted a physician, but this treatment did not benefit me very much.
