After the reading of the min-first Monday in March, when the utes of last session of the court, East Feliciana grand jury meets. the District Attorney made a motion that Judge Woodside reconsider and annul his orders, made in chambers, recusing himself in the McQueen and McKow en cases. The District Attorney cited the laws and authorities governing such matters and showed that the Court was in error in recusing himself in the McKowen case, and that there was no ground for his recusation in the McQueen case. When counsel for the defense were asked by the Court if they had any statement to make, Judge Lawrason addressed the Court and stated that the defense had no objection to offer, and that they had as soon be tried before one fair judge as another.

In explaining why he entered the order of recusation Judge Woodside said:

"When this matter first devel oped I was notified that a man had been murdered. I did not know who the murdered man was or who had killed him. Shortly afterward the sheriff in formed me that the man who was murdered was E. K. Judson, a lunatic from the Jackson Insane Asylum, and that Dr. Mc-Kowen was charged with the crime. Dr. McKowen is a cousin of my wife. I consulted with a number of lawyers and friends and they told me that they believed I should recuse myself. I investigated the law and found a decision which satisfied me that I had a right to recuse myself, and I consulted with counsel in the case. They agreed with me that the law authorized my issuing the order of recusation.

"Later McQueen was arrested and charged with being an accessory to the crime. It then became plain to me that I could not sit in one case and not in the other. I have given the matter considerable attention, and I now order the previous order rescinded."

After Judge Woodside's order rescinding his previous order was made, District Attorney Golsan moved that the defendant, H. E. McQueen, be discharged, as the State had summoned no witnesses, and had no evidence to offer. Mr. McQueen was liberated and the Judson murder case closed for the present.

Different views are held by different people in regard to this latest phase of the Judson case. There are people who have conthe popular magazines. Times-Democrat:

When it became evident that the good roads movement was to be made a political one, and used as a battering ram to knock holes in our Constitution and political system, there was a natural opposition from those who do not want Sanders; and obstacles and difficulties of every kind were placed by them in the path of the good roads movement. It became evident that there were many persons in Louisiana who did not To the Officers and Members of want good roads, if Gov. Sanders and his faction were to gain any great political advantage by them. The present halt in the Tuesday, December 7, 1909 for movement, the "failure" as some of the papers call it, is the natural consequence of this unfortunate tangling up of a great public improvement, of benefit to the whole people, with the selfish interests of factional politicians.

Whether it is possible at this day to untangle and separate the two-the interests of the people in securing a great public improvement, and the interests of the politicians in getting officeit is difficult to say; but before we go a step further several points must be settled. The voters of Louisiana are not willing to sell their birthright for a mess of pottage-to surrender their Constitution, their choice of officials, their control of the government in exchange for good roads built with their own money. Even if Gov. Sanders were the only man in Louisiana who could carry through the good roads scheme, it would be infinitely better to postpone this improvement, however greatly it may be needed, than surrender the governmental reforms won by the earnest popular efforts of the last half dozen years. The price asked for good roads is far too as much patronage as Gov. Sanhigh.

going on today with the object of amending Article 63 of the State as well as to himself to come out and say so. On the other hand, to succeed himself, "thus preif he continues to remain silent, it should be taken by the people of the State, that it is true, and the last moment he will show his hand.—Assumption Pioneer.
