REARING THE DAIRY CALF.

The fat of milk is so valuable that all calves designed for the dairy should be reared on skim milk. The skim-milk calf is usually allowed to run with the dam two or three days, though many dairymen never allow it to draw milk from the mother, claiming that if separated at once it learns more readily to drink from the pail. In any event the calf should get the first milk or colostrum, which is designed by nature for cleansing the bowels and starting the digestive functions. Warm, fresh, unskimmed milk should be fed from the pail several times daily until the calf is two or three weeks old, after which skim milk is gradually substituted, the change covering a period of two weeks.

When the calf is two or three weeks old add to its milk a small allowance of some fine concentrate such as low-grade flour, continuing such feed for three or four weeks while the stomach is small and incapable of utilizing coarser food. Later other concentrates may replace this, being placed in feed-boxes where the calves may readily eat the grain after eating their skim milk.

The calf may be taught to eat grain by rubbing a little on its mouth when it is through drinking milk. From this it will soon learn to eat from the feed-box. There is little danger of calves getting too fat on any of the common grains while being fed skim milk. Should any of the calves show a tendency to put on fat, a little bran or oil-meal may be added and the corn-meal removed or reduced. After weaning the calf great care will be needed in selecting grains containing the right amount of protein and mineral matter for the proper development of bone and muscle.

There is little or no danger of the calf being fed skim milk eating too much grain. The young calf makes better gains for grain consumed than the older calf, which is an additional reason for giving it all it will eat. Limiting the grain ration causes a loss in gain and is seldom to be recommended. The calf is possessed of a good set of grinding teeth and when four to six weeks of age is able to do most of its own grinding. When possible it is better to feed a mixture of grains than one, but a large variety does not seem to be of any special merit. It is not advisable to mix grain with the milk. The calf needs to masticate it properly and not gulp it down before the starch matter of the feed is acted on by the saliva. This precaution will frequently avoid scours.

Calves will eat roughage at about the same time that they begin to eat grain; viz. two or three weeks of age. They will eat about the same amount of each at first. As the calf grows older the proportion of roughage to grain increases, and by the time the calf is six months of age it will have consumed about three times as much roughage as grain. The hay can be placed in one corner of the calf-pen. Any left uneaten should be removed at the next feeding time and a new supply added.

Some feeders have difficulty from scours in turning calves on pasture. This may be overcome by allowing the calves to graze for only a short time the first day and gradually in-creating the time each day, until they become accustomed to handling the green feed by an increasing daily allowance of soiling crops. Sudden changes in feeding should be avoided.

The calf is best taught to drink milk from the pail by using the fingers. Hand-reared calves should be confined at feeding time in simple stanchions, to remain for a time after the milk is drunk, in order to consume their grain allowance and pass the desire to suck each other's ears. It is important to have a fresh supply of suitable dry concentrates, preferably whole grain, in the feed-box at this particular time. Dry feed when eaten takes up the saliva then flowing freely in the mouth, stimulated by the warm milk. Where the calf is slow to take such feed, the grain or meal should be slipped into the mouth a few times in order that it may learn to taste of it. All excess grain should be removed from the feed-box after each meal, since it grows stale and moulds.

When skim-milk calves do poorly, the blame usually rests with the feeder. The cause of the trouble will ordinarily be found in some one or more of the following conditions: lack of sunlight and fresh air; unsanitary stalls, or boxes that are not properly cleaned and disinfected; feeding too much milk, or at irregular intervals; feeding stale or chilled milk; feeding from pails that have not been scalded daily; feeding improper concentrated feed, or allowing the excess to ferment and stale in the feed-box.

THE WAY OF THE WORLD.

Listen, daughter! Once there was a nice girl—just like you—who was quite sure that when her time came to marry she could not live in a house any smaller than her father's. "Love in a cottage" was not for her. She felt sure that she must have an immense library, with a fireplace big enough to take in a six-foot log; that there must be a drawing-room with parquetry flooring and thick Persian rugs sliding about on it. The dining-room must be large enough to serve twenty comfortably.

A school friend of hers came to visit her about a year and a half after she was married and found her living in a neat little frame house on a side street, ridiculously happy with her husband and baby. There wasn't any drawing-room and the largest room was about the size of the vestibule in her girlhood home. "I know what you're thinking," laughed the happy little bride to her guest. "You're wondering how I could make up my mind to live in this tiny piano box. But I've made a discovery. I've found that it isn't the size of the house that matters, it's the size of the heart and the biggest hearts can live in little houses."

The bride was your mother, daughter, and the baby was you. So when the right boy comes along, you'll forget all about your ideas of a concrete bungalow, with garage and sleeping porches.

SINGING THE HAIR.

(Journal of American Medical Ass'n.)

Singeing the hair is recommended to overcome splitting at the ends and to prevent falling of the hair, the reason for the latter being that it "closes the pores and keeps the fluid in the hair."

With the long hair of a woman which has a tendency to split at the ends, it is possible that singeing the tips may be of some use; it substitutes a charred blunt end of fused horn for one tapering to a point or cut clean across. But even in cases of this sort it is less useful than greasing lightly the hair and thus supplying the fat which is lacking in such hair. For the hair of men, which is kept short, singeing is not of any use in preventing splitting; hair which is not allowed to grow to its natural length does not split, unless it has a deep-seated disturbance for which there is no such simple remedy.

JACKSON HAS WORST FIRE SINCE 1875.

ertion to save the A. S. Tomb Drug Co.'s store, which was across the street from the store of Klein Bros. Mr. W. Carmena and assistants succeeded in saving the Cumberland Telephone Exchange. The large brick store of D. M. Pipes at the upper end of the block alone withstood the flames that swept the street. The heavy rainfall of Sunday helped to put out the burning debris.

This disastrous fire, strange to say, started at the same spot where the fire of 1875 began, and was equally as destructive.

Klein Bros. have opened in the stand belonging to Mr. Max Klein across from D. M. Pipes' store. Lumber is already on the ground to rebuild and they expect to spare no time and pains to erect speedily a new and better building on their corner across from the A. S. Tomb Drug Co. Mr. W. Carmena made almost immediate repairs where phone connection was cut off. It is not yet known whether Mr. Werber or Mr. Vresinski will resume business. The post-office is temporarily located in the small room adjoining A. S. Tomb's Drug Store.

Life is too short to waste In critic peep or cynic bark, Quarrel or reprimand. 'Twill soon be dark, Up! Mind thine own aim, and God speed the mark.
