SUCCESS LIES IN MUTUAL SERVICE.

450 acres McGehee's Surecrop Red Rustproof Oats are up and growing nicely. We erred in covering some too shallow and such planting shows poor stand. Covering one to two inches is best. Never "plow in" oats.

Shipment of straw on sales of hay is simply swindling.

All hands are chopping and cleaning up. Will haul out manure in February, plow level for corn in March, planting level in late March, and work with very shallow two-horse cultivators. We find Hasting's Prolific our best seed.

Correspondence welcomed.

SWEET CORN FOR THE VEGETABLE GARDEN.

Why not grow some genuine sweet corn in your vegetable garden this year? The roasting ears from the common field corn may be good, but genuine sweet corn is much better. If you are not growing sweet corn in your garden, you are missing one of the greatest delicacies that the summer garden affords.

Stowell's Evergreen is the variety of sweet corn to plant in Louisiana. It is late-maturing and produces large ears of excellent variety.

Sweet corn should be planted on rich, well-drained land. Soil conditions prevailing in successful vegetable gardens are usually favorable to sweet corn production. The seed is generally drilled on a 3½ foot ridge, dropping 5 to 8 seed to the foot and covering from 1 to 2 inches. In planting it is well to wait till the soil is warm, as sweet corn seed rots readily in cold, wet land. Late March or early April is the usual time for the first planting at Baton Rouge. Successive plantings may be made at intervals of two to three weeks to prolong the supply during the summer. The equivalent of 300 feet of row at each planting should give an ample quantity of sweet corn for the average family, and one and one-half to two pints of good seed should be sufficient for a planting.

Cultivation and fertilization are similar to that for field corn. Well-rotted stable manure supplemented by a little acid phosphate should give the best results. Sweet corn, under usual conditions, may be left a little thicker than field corn—about 18 inches between stalks for Stowell's Evergreen.

Sweet corn is most palatable when just entering the dough stage. If possible, it should be gathered just before cooking, as it loses its sugar content very rapidly after being removed from the stalk. If hot, dry weather prevails, the grains will harden rapidly. Under such conditions the surplus might be canned to advantage.—G. L. Tiebout, Extension Division, Louisiana State University.—L. S. U. Press Bulletin.

TWO CARE-FREE DAYS.

(Robert J. Burdette.)

There are two days of the week which and about which I never worry. Two care-free days, kept sacredly free from fear and apprehension.

One of these days is yesterday. Yesterday, with all its cares and frets, with all its pains and aches, all its faults and blunders, has passed forever beyond the reach of my recall. I cannot undo an act that I wrought; I cannot unsay a word that I said on yesterday. All that it holds of my life, of wrongs, regret and sorrow, is in the hands of the Mighty Love that can bring the honey out of the rock, and sweet waters out of the bitterest desert—that love that can make the wrong things right, that can turn weeping into laughter, that can give beauty for ashes, the garment of praise for the spirit of heaviness, joy of the morning for woe of the night.

Save for the beautiful memories and tender, that linger like the perfume of roses in the heart of the day that is gone, I have nothing to do with yesterday. It was mine; it is God's.

And the other day I do not worry about is to-morrow. To-morrow with all its possibilities, adversities, its burdens, its perils, its large promise and poor performance, its failures and mistakes, is far beyond the reach of my mastery as its dead sister yesterday. It is a day of God's. Its sun will rise in resolute splendor, or behind a mask of sweeping clouds. But it will rise. Until then the same love and patience that held yesterday and holds to-morrow, shines with tender promise into the heart of to-day. I have no possession in that unborn day of grace. All else is in the safe keeping of the Infinite Love that holds for me the treasure of yesterday. The love that is higher than the stars, wider than the skies, deeper than the seas. To-morrow—it is God's day. It will be mine.

There is left for myself, then, but one day of the week—to-day. Any man can fight the battles of to-day. Any woman can resist the temptations of to-day. O, friends, it is only when the burdens and cares of to-day carefully measured out to us by the Infinite Wisdom and Might that gives with them the promise, "As thy day, so shall thy strength be," we willfully add the burdens of those two awful eternities—yesterday and tomorrow—such burdens as only the mighty God can sustain—that we break down. It isn't the experience of to-day that drives men mad. It is the remorse for something that happened yesterday, the dread of to-morrow may disclose.

These are God's days. Leave them to Him.

Therefore, I think, and I do, and I journey but one day at a time. That is the easiest way. That is the man's day. Nay, rather that is our day—God's and mine. And while faithfully and dutifully I run my course, and work my appointed task on that day of ours, God Almighty and All loving takes care of yesterday and to-morrow.

PLANT VELVET BEANS WITH THE CORN CROP.

"Plant velvet beans in your corn patch this year," is the advice offered Louisiana corn club boys by W. R. Perkins, forage crop specialist, Extension Division, "L. S. U. "Turn the beans under in the fall, use the same piece of land for your club work next year and watch the improvement in your crops.

"There are several good varieties of velvet beans, but we suggest that you plant the Early Speckled (100-day) variety. They will make ample growth on the land you have selected and will produce a good crop of seed. Plant from one-third to one-half bushel of seed per acre. This will give you a hill of velvet beans every 10 or 12 inches. Plant them on the row between the hills of corn at the first working of the corn unless the corn is not planted until after the middle of April. Cover the seed about one inch or one and one-half inches deep. It is best to inoculate the seed, though on good land or where stable manure has been used as a fertilizer inoculation may be omitted. The vines do not grow fast until mid-summer, and they will not be in the way when the corn is being cultivated. Later in the season they will wrap up everything and will interfere somewhat with gathering the crop and the selection of seed. This disadvantage, however, is very small when compared with the fertilizing value of the crop.

THE FARMER BOY AND THE CLUB MEMBER.

A farmer boy works ten hours a day, plows and cultivates the earth, feels no sense of ownership, has neither heart nor head interest in his work. That's drogery.

A farmer boy gets up early in the morning, works all day, has no partnership with his father, no chance of recreation, is denied club fellowship, has no ownership in cows and animals such as corn, baby beef, pigs, or poultry. That's tough.

A club member takes a few grains of seed, manages them through soil, environment, insect and plant diseases, and produces vegetables, net profits that win the prize at the club festival or the State Fair. That's skill.

A club leader writes a few pages of instruction on worthless pieces of paper, puts them into the hands of a club boy, and thus guides him to a business profit of $50 in a single season. That's a good investment.

A club member may take an idle piece of soil, invest it with 30 cents worth of seed, a dollar's worth of fertilizer, and a few hours of brain and brawn, and make a profit of $150. That's capital born of achievement.

Fathers and mothers maintain active membership in lodges, clubs, associations, societies, guilds, smokers, and unions, but fail to see the need of encouraging club work for boys and girls. That's unfair.

To give boys and girls manly and womanly jobs, membership is a club of their own, feeling of ownership, an opportunity to do things, a real motive, for study and achievement, a feeling of liability; in short, a cooperative interest in the whole business of home making and farming. That's common sense.—O. P. Benson, U. S. Department of Agriculture.

FLAG-BURNING PARSON GETS HIS

"Your verdict goes out to the world and shows the people that the American flag must be revered and respected."

With these words Judge McIntyre of New York thanked the jury which found a verdict of guilty against Soucek White, pastor of the church of Social Revolution and two of his followers, charged with having burned the American flag with the colors of other nations in a "melting pot" ceremony in the back yard of the church last June.

"It is a warning to the aliens of this country that American institutions must be accorded proper respect," continued the judge, "especially in these momentous days in the nation's history."

Six men and two women, jointly indicted, were acquitted.

White and his followers will be sentenced this afternoon. The maximum penalty is thirty days imprisonment or $100 fine, or both.

COTTON PLANTING DATES IN LOUISIANA.

No fixed date can be recommended for planting cotton in Louisiana. The proper time to plant will vary with the seasons, just as in some years spring will begin earlier than in other years. The dates of planting that gave the maximum yields before the boll weevil came are the best dates to follow now. Extremely early planting and late planting should both be avoided. The dates given below have been shown to be the best and safest by the experiences of the farmers themselves.

In Southern Louisiana cotton should be planted from March 25 to April 10; in Central Louisiana, from April 1 to April 15; and in the northern part of the State, especially in the sandy uplands, from April 15 to April 30.

When planted on dates that approximate these, cotton will germinate quickly and grow off rapidly. These dates give plenty of time for thorough preparation of the soil before planting, which is very important.

On the stiff or buckshot lands of the river bottoms and on all new lands cotton may be planted considerably earlier than the dates given.—Mason Snowden, Extension Division, Louisiana State University.—L. S. U. Press Bulletin.

FLAG CANNOT BE PRINTED IN NEWSPAPER, IS RULING.

The practice of certain newspapers in parading the American flag in their columns in red, white and blue or in more modest black ink received a jolt here when the Iowa department of justice gave out an opinion that such papers are violating the federal law.

The status on which the opinion was based provides that no flag or representation of a flag shall be printed or stamped on any article of merchandise. The opinion was based on a feeling that newspapers which decorate their front pages day by day with representations of the flag are doing so without any special patriotic motive but more for commercial or "circulation" purposes and accordingly the attorney general takes the ground that the federal statute applies.

beans should be gathered after frost and the vines turned under deep. If you will plant this piece of land in corn next year you will get a much better crop and will have conducted a demonstration that should be worth a great deal to every man in the community who sees it.
