The Missing Cent.

The Journal of Education gives the following. Submit the following question to your school and we will give a nice book strap to the first boy under twelve years of age who finds the "missing cent." To the first girl under twelve years of age who gives a solution, we will send a neat book bag.

Two boys together sell sixty apples, each one selling thirty. One boy sells his apples two for one cent, and receives fifteen cents. The other boy sells his three for one cent and receives ten cents. Both together receive twenty five cents.

The next day one boy says he alone will sell sixty apples at the same rate as they both did the day before, viz: five apples for two cents and he does so, but receives only twenty four cents. What becomes of the missing cent?—Pointe Coupe Banner.

OPENING THE EXPOSITION.

When it was announced with some flourish and considerable hurrah that President Arthur would start the machinery of the Exposition by lightly pressing an electric button in the east room of the White House, in Washington, the mind of the patriotic American glowed with enthusiasm. The country papers took up the text and elaborated it, explaining how a wire between Washington and New Orleans would be cleared and how when the proper moment arrived the President would touch his little button, and off would start the vast machinery. Attention was directed to the wonderful age in which we live; to the impossibility of the accomplishment of such a feat, a few years ago; how a faint pressure, hardly perceptible, would start into life thousands of horsepower, and how truly American such a possibility was. We all felt this. We all spoke of the pressure on a button 1300 miles away setting the machinery in motion, and felt proud and happy that we lived in such an age.

The papers containing the account of the opening were eagerly sought, the lengthy proceedings were read and at last, each reader arrived at the thrilling start of the machinery. The President touched his little button sure enough, but it didn't start anything, all it did was to convey a signal, a mere sound, and then, Maj Burkes little boy pulled a lever and the machinery started. The patriotic citizen feels that he has been wrought up to no purpose. That he has bragged and boasted, only to make himself ridiculous, that the magic button is a fraud and a delusion. That the Exposition itself is smaller than he supposed it was. That the President is a smoothie hypochrite and that life is not worth living anyhow. Away with the magnetic button.

Shooting at Waverly.

A shooting affray took place at Waverly last Tuesday which resulted in the death of W. H. Dixon by Isaiah Shepherd both colored. Dixon had whipped Shepherd's boy and Shepherd's wife went to see him about it when he talked very rough to her. Shepherd joined in the talk, and Dixon made at him. Shepherd fired over Dixon's head. Dixon in making for Shepherd fell and as he rose Shepherd put his pistol to Dixon's left breast and fired, killing him instantly. Shepherd was arrested and brought to Tallulah from which place he was taken to jail on Christmas morning.

He Took Them In.

Two months ago a young man arrived at St. Mary's W. Va., and it soon became noised abroad that he was the son of a New Orleans millionaire looking for a chance to invest his surplus wealth. He gave his name Charles Sargeant, and professed to have invested largely in England, and as he had a large correspondence from England, which reached him via New Orleans, his story was believed. He announced his intention of investing $100,000 in flour and saw mills, and making a corner on all the lumber and wheat in that section. The people were rejoiced and Sargeant became a social lion. He formed companies for his mills, in all of which he held three-fourths of the stock and was the treasurer. The first assessment was paid last Friday. That night Sargeant attended a church fair and handed the minister $20 as a token of friendship. Nothing has been seen of him since, but $375 of his forged checks have been presented at the banks. He beat his hotel and all classes of tradesmen, but paid his washwoman like a gentleman. His winnings on the mill snap amount to $3000.—T-D.

Cheaper Than Coal.

Farmers in many parts of Nebraska are burning corn for fuel. They have figured the matter out to their own satisfaction and are confident that it is cheaper to burn corn than it is to sell it and buy coal. Soft coal is worth in that State about twenty two cents a bushel, and corn does not find a ready sale in the rural markets for more than twelve cents. Experiments have shown that two bushels of corn will produce more warmth than one bushel of coal and farmers are thus burning the former and saving themselves the trouble of hauling it to market and drawing the coal home again.—Ex
