THE REVISED BIBLE.

To be Placed on Sale in America This Month. Precautions Against Pirates Carefully Taken.—Six Styles of the New Edition, From Cloth to the Finest Morocco.

The revised English version of the Old Testament will be placed on sale over the counters of the various religious publication societies on the 21st inst., a trifle more than two years after the issue of the New Testament. It will appear on the same day in England. J. B. Lippincott & Co., of Philadelphia, and Thomas Nelson & Sons, of New York, are the sole agents for its publication in America.

FIRST AND CHEAPEST is printed in "solid" pearl type, 16mo., double column, bound in cloth, boards, and red edges. This is a dollar a copy. The type is exceedingly small. A prominent publisher connected with a religious society said, last night: "This is the cheapest edition that appears, and it is an outrage that a book so many will want to read and which costs such a comparatively high price (when compared with the cheap edition of the authorized version) is printed in such abominably small type."

THE COMMERCIAL TRAVELER.

Traits of Character—His Ability to Spend Every Cent of His Salary. A commercial traveler who has seen service, or who devotes his whole energy to the work to which the life is a hard one. The young to whom the excitement is a pleasant novelty, the travel and attendant amusements good sports laughs at the story at first; but not after a couple of years. The constant strain, irregular hours and habits, and frequent temptations to imbibe, quickly combine to tear down the strongest system. The last item is a large one. "Unless a traveling man is very careful," says a veteran in his line, "he is apt to turn out a drunkard before he knows it."

For the travelers themselves, they prefer self-chief to check, and would be termed self-confident rather than "gally," but whatever it may be, no drummer with any other manner could sell as much and the compound of bombast, shrewdness, knowledge of human nature and acquaintance with the world, his customers and particular lines of goods wins the day. Sam'l of Pozen has it all condensed in a degree exaggerated to the point of burlesque, and the beginner at the business is apt to assume the commercial manner to an extreme to conceal his greenness, but in the trained man it is pleasantly mellowed and indispensable.

WEDDED, BUT NO WIFE.

The Most Remarkable Divorce Case on Record. The most remarkable divorce case that was ever known was recently before the courts of Brown county, says a letter from Georgetown, Ohio, to the Cincinnati Enquirer. It was remarkable in many of its phases, one of which there was an entire absence of scandal throughout the whole affair. The parties in the case are of the best families of Brown county, and, notwithstanding the decree of divorce, the relations existing between them are as pleasant and friendly as between any warm friends where the deepest respect and highest regard exists. Here you have a divorce without a cross look or an angry word, much less a blow, as ground for the petition. The divorce was obtained by the husband while he sincerely loved and respected his wife. The lady is a thorough Christian and as gentle as a dove. She made no defense, and is to-day held in the highest esteem by her own immediate family and that of her recent husband. The prominence of the parties interested and the strange features of the case render the story worth the telling. Hon. Chilton A. White is one of the most popular gentlemen in the state, and in his time has served four years in congress and several terms in the Ohio senate. He was a great friend and close companion of Vallandigham, and a more honorable, high-toned gentleman could not be found anywhere. He is now about 58 years of age, and there has never been a suspicion of aught against him in public or private. Nor will there ever be, for Mr. White is of the good old-fashioned stock that knows but one path through life, and that is the road traversed by only those who are upright and honest. He is a lawyer by profession, but in spite of that he is as square as a die.

In his youth Mr. White married Miss Fanny Boyle, sister of Mr. John Boyle, of Perry township, Brown county. Mr. Boyle's firm of Roach & Boyle, contractors, doing business in Cincinnati. This lady was reared a Catholic. She had a sister named Miss Isabel Boyle, who married a Mr. Hall. In the course of human events Mrs. Fanny White died, and so did Mr. Hall. Mr. White and his sister-in-law saw considerable of each other, and concluded, after a long series of talks, that it would be a good plan for them to marry. So their friends were apprised of their engagement, and everybody was pleased at the news. Mrs. Hall, as the wedding day drew nigh, began to have some misgivings as to the propriety of the marriage, but her friends informed her that if she withdrew from the compact at that stage she would precipitate a scandal. Mrs. Hall was even a more devoted Catholic than her deceased sister, and she was filled with misgivings lest she might be doing something that would clash with her religious duty if she married her brother-in-law. However, on June 19, 1888, she was married to Mr. White. The ceremony was performed in Cincinnati. Immediately after the wedding the couple made a tour of the east, visiting Washington, New York, and other important cities. They were gone several weeks. At the onset the bride tearfully informed her husband that she was thoroughly convinced that the wedding should never have taken place, and begged him to consider her nothing more to him than a sister. She was gentle and kindly in her intercourse with Mr. White, but was as firm as a rock in her determination and conclusion that the alliance was unholy. Mr. White respected his bride's request, and he even so much as entered her room at the hotels where they stopped. Had she been his sister in reality he could not have treated her with greater delicacy. Upon their return the lady went to her old home in Perry township, and Mr. White repaired to his fireside at Georgetown. Subsequently he visited his wife and her family, by whom he was received cordially, but he conducted himself as only a near and dear friend of the family. He generally went there on Saturday and remained until Monday—all the time respecting his wife's desire to lead a life of celibacy. The two frequently discussed their strange relation to each other, and the lady endeavored to convince herself that it would be no sin to perform the duties of a wife under the circumstances, but she found it utterly impossible to reconcile such a course with her ideas of religion. So at last they resolved that rather than maintain their strange relation to each other, and in order to prevent the gossip from talking they would procure a divorce. With this understanding Mr. White filed a petition for divorce, alleging—as he had to allege something—that his wife was guilty of neglect of duty. Judge De Witt C. London, of Georgetown, granted the divorce February 18, 1893. This we have the strange spectacle of a courtship, a marriage, and a divorce without a quarrel, without an unkind thought or a pang of jealousy, or any of the elements that heretofore have entered into the history of all separations of man and wife since the world began. Mr. White continues to pay visits to the home of his ex-wife, and is treated with the same kindly consideration that characterized his relations previous to the decree that snapped the siren cord that bound him to the woman of his choice. Both are held in the highest esteem by their friends, and neither will ever suffer a jot in the estimation of their many admiring friends. The conscientious scruples of the lady are appreciated as being the promptings of an honest Christian heart, and her conduct is accepted as being actuated by what she believed to be her duty. The refined delicacy and nobility of action on the part of Mr. White are viewed by all conversant with the circumstances surrounding the case as the conduct of a true gentleman, and a man of the finest sense of honor.

Dr. De Blank—My dear, it is a new affair, but if I were you I'd send those new striped stockings back and get those exchanged for plain ones.

Mrs. De Blank—"Why, dear? They are very pretty."

"I know, but they are out of fashion."

"Thank you, I knew it, you old deceiver. So that's where you spend your evenings, is it Oh, I—"

"My dear, why, what's the matter?"

"And you said you never went to roller skating rinks."

"I don't. I saw that in a paper."

"Oh!" Philadelphia Call.

CIRCUS APPRENTICES.

How Eminent Stars Have Learned the Business. "There are no circus apprentices nowadays," said W. D. Hutchinson, of Barnum's show, recently; "circus proprietors get their talent ready-made, and only want the best. The old way of training for the ring was by an apprenticeship of seldom less than six years. One of the best old-time trainers was Levi S. North, who was in his prime about 1840. At that time circus people were not brought up to do any particular act. A good man was supposed to be able to do everything, to be as good an acrobat as a juggler, or as clever a clown as a barrel rider. The boy apprentice would usually commence by learning to ride a pair of ponies. The method of teaching boys to be barrel riders was almost the same in those days as at the present time. They were first put to work on a 'mechanic,' which consists of a pole set in the middle of a saw-dust ring, with a high arm, over which ran a rope. The end of the rope was fastened to the boy's belt as he stood on the horse and the instructor held the other. As the horse galloped around the ring the pole and arm revolved. If the pupil slipped from the horse's back he was saved a fall by the rope fastened to his belt. They were made to practice three or four hours a day. Levi North's circus performers were made up principally of apprentices, and North himself was a performer in the ring. For practicing on the road where no 'mechanic' could be erected, a short rope was tied to the pupil's belt and fastened to a ring in the saddle. This prevented him from falling to the ground. The old pyramids always had the youngsters with them learning, but in these times gymnasts come from the city gymnasiums or learned their business in the barn-loft of the old homestead. Some times a performer finds a smart boy, teaches him during the winter, and the next season brings him out in a 'brother' or combination act. There are two large schools for circus riders and gymnasts in the East. One is kept near Paterson, N. J., by S. Eaton Stone, one of the best known of the old riders, and the other by James Cook, an Englishman, who came to this country with Lake R. Lent, a sort of apprenticeship to Sam Stockney, the rider and general performer. Rose Madien, another good rider of that time was also a pupil of her father. One of the pet stories of the old-time circus men is that told about the famous barrel rider, Ella Zvara, who appeared about 1860, with S. Q. Stokes, an old time showman. In New York Zvara's daring riding aroused great enthusiasm. She did things on horseback that no woman had ever yet attempted, and as she was very pretty and of splendid physique, she soon had hundreds of admirers. She began a tour of the country but had not gone far before she met with an accident. It was trivial in nature, but most alarming in its results, for in half an hour the whole show knew that Ella Zvara, the beautiful woman rider, was a man! It was afterwards found out that her proper name was Omar Kingsley, an American lad. Kingsley afterward married Sallie Stickney, the rider, and died in India. All the great riders served apprenticeship in their younger days. Jim Robinson, who was famous in 1860 as a barrel rider, served under his brother, John Robinson; Bob Stickney, who was a favorite in 1857, was trained by his father, Sam Stockney; 'Billy' Morgan, who was with the European Circus as late as 1878, and who astonished people by his daring hurdle jumping, was another of the old-time apprentice boys. He was murdered by robbers last winter in Texas. Charles W. Fish, one of the finest of modern riders, was apprenticed to Charles Rogers, of the old circus firm of Spaulding & Rogers, and William Dunton served his apprenticeship with 'Bill' Lake.

"Consumption Cure"

would be a truthful name to give to Dr. Pierce's "Golden Medical Discovery," the most efficacious medicine yet discovered for arresting the early development of pulmonary disease. But "consumption cure" would not sufficiently indicate the scope of its influence and usefulness. In all the many diseases which spring from a derangement of the liver and blood the "Discovery" is a safe and sure specific of all druggists.

How often is the light of the household dimmed by signs of melancholy or irritability on the part of the ladies. Yet they are not to be blamed, for they are the result of ailments peculiar to that sex, which men know not of. But the cause may be removed and joy restored by the use of Dr. Pierce's "Favorite Prescription," which acts as a tonic and nerve for debilitated women, is certain, safe and pleasant. It is beyond all compare the great healer of women.

Health, Wealth and Happiness. Are more intimately connected with a sound stomach and good condition of the blood than most people suppose. Thin blood means weakness, languor and misery.
