TRADE AT HOME.

When purchasers want almost anything in the clothing, furnishing or grocery line they can supply their wants at the business emporiums of Winnfield who carry varied stocks of everything for human needs. The wide-awake and progressive merchants can be found by scanning the advertising space of the local papers, for this is an evidence that they have faith in the home journals and are ready to aid them in making known their wares. The man who fails to advertise his business loses more patronage than would pay the expense of making known his holdings many times over. Customers should give the preference to their home merchants, for it will cost more to patronize the mail order houses than it would to buy at home. It is patent that money spent at home will remain at home and make the community that much more prosperous. Try it.

HUSTLE FOR IT.

If the people of Winnfield—merchants and residents generally—want the town to continue to grow and flourish, they must get up and hustle. This is a period when the most active, energetic and early bird catches the worm, and those that sit in the shade and sing songs of praise without any active attempt to try their powers of flight, are sure to become hungry and inert. The toothsome pie is made for those who reach out for it to satisfy their longing wants. Thus if business and public benefits are to be secured, it will require exertion, harmony of action and earnest endeavor to secure them. This is the season when people must get a move on themselves if they would achieve anything worth doing.

BEATING THE WEEVIL.

An esteemed friend, writing from Cammack, in Natchitoches parish, under date of March 28, says he is managing a plantation of 750 acres that is planted in corn, cotton and hay. About 200 acres of cotton are planted, 50 of which are up and cut, and planting will be finished this week. That is what might be called beating the weevil to the cotton. It is noted in this connection, that a much greater acreage is being planted this year in corn and alfalfa and more attention being paid to hogs and cattle. It is a fact that in some localities very little hay, corn and oats are being purchased for making the crop, and this year, with a favorable season, there will be no demand for these Western products among a great majority of the farmers, or pork either, for that matter. The farmers are on the right road to prosperity, plenty and independence.

Pay Your Dog License.

All persons owning dogs in the town of Winnfield are requested to have tags for the year 1909 placed on same, otherwise they will be killed according to town ordinances. J. J. PAYNE, City Marshal.

The Post Office.

The receipts at the Winnfield Post Office for the quarter ending March 31, have been sufficient to place it in the second class. This is a highly gratifying showing for the business importance and standing of this prosperous town.

An Enjoyable Picnic.

The pupils of the High School enjoyed their short vacation at the Pace Oil Well and Natatorium on Thursday. They spent the day in romps and games and bathing in the refreshing waters of the bathing pool and the freedom of the woods just blooming into their fresh spring verdure.

Grand Leader Opening.

Last Tuesday that elegant dry goods emporium, the Grand Leader, had a millinery opening, which large numbers of the citizens, and particularly the ladies, attended. On the upper rear floor of the building was found the display of millinery, consisting of hats in endless variety and especially the latest mushroom style, flowers, ribbons and all manner of trimmings which so much delight the eyes of our fair Southern women. They were tastily displayed in glass cases and on the tables, "things of beauty and a joy forever" showing the deft handiwork and skill and genius of the fair fingers that conceived and fashioned them. Presiding over this bower of beauty were Mrs. Eva Wagner and Miss Adah Smith, whose gracious smiles and warm words of welcome added additional charm to the beauty of their surroundings. Miss Mary Wood, one of Winnfield's most charming society ladies, dispensed, with brightest smile and brighter words, some elegant fruit punch to the guests who came to enjoy this fashionable opening of fresh and attractive millinery. It was a scene and reception worthy of this splendid dry goods establishment and was thoroughly enjoyable.
