

HOW MRS. BROWN SUFFERED

During Change of Life—How Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Made Her a Well Woman.

Jola, Kansas.—"During the Change of Life I was sick for two years. Before I took your medicine I could not bear the weight of my clothes and was bloated very badly. I doctored with three doctors but they did me no good. They said nature must have its way. My sister advised me to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and I purchased a bottle. It was gone the bloating left me and I was not so sore. I continued taking it until I had taken twelve bottles. I am stronger than I have been for years and can do all my work, even the heaviest. Your medicine is worth its weight in gold. I cannot praise it enough. If more women would take your medicine there would be more well women. You may use this letter for the good of others."—Mrs. D. Brown, 609 N. Walnut St., Jola, Kan.

Change of Life is one of the most painful periods of a woman's existence. It is a time when every woman should remember there is no other remedy known to successfully carry women through this trying period as Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

If you want special advice write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential) Lynn, Mass. Your letter will be answered, read and answered by a woman and held in strict confidence.

"No, it is not. It is a fact."

"I discovered a New Game."

"I had lived in a flat all of Willie's life, so that the little boy's name of larks and flora was as familiar to him as the names of the birds and flowers when they went to board school."

"I was very enthusiastically started by the very enthusiastic start of a chicken, armed with a gun and other missiles."

"The hostess protested to his indignation from the window."

"I ought to forgive dear Willie."

"I know that's a chicken."

"I finished the Bishop."

"An English youngster who so surprised the kindly bishop."

"I might be, my child?"

"I'm seven!" the frightened child.

"I attended the meeting."

"I made your husband so miserable."

"I was yesterday."

"A young lady tells how she is so sensitive as to the taste of coffee."

"I had been very poor for years," she says. "I loved to drink it for breakfast, but it was by accident, as it were, that I became the cause of the constant headaches from which I suffer every day, and of the nervousness and sleep from my pillow."

"I gave me acute pain, and it was so injurious, because it was the same drug found in the coffee we used at home."

"I got the taste right when I got the good coffee we had in the hotel. I have drunk it ever since."

"I have no more headaches, and I have more energy than I have for years."

JUDICIOUS TREATMENT OF A DRAFT COLT

Big and Graceful Clydesdale Stallion.

Beginning with the colt when he is young is the safest method to go about making a dependable horse out of him. Frighten him or hurt him when you first begin handling him and you will have a long and tedious job ahead of you.

A colt is a whole lot like a child, says a writer in Farm Progress. What intelligence he has does not come to him all at once. He must be taken along step by step. Handle him a little today, and don't forget all about him tomorrow. Halt him while he is still a youngster, and be careful not to let him angle or throw himself.

The main thing is to get him accustomed to the human hand and the human voice while he is still a yearling. When he is about eighteen months old his really serious training may begin, but he has no business in heavy harness, pulling at heavy loads, when he is at that age. The spring he is two years old he may be used a little, but he should not be placed in plow harness and expected to make half of a team.

Light harrowing, hauling wood, being hitched to a light roller or to a light road wagon, is about as much as can be rightfully expected of the two-year-old. I have seen a good many promising young draft colts ruined by putting them at hard work too soon. I realize that necessity sometimes forces the owner to use them, but when this is the case they should be shirked as much as possible.

When I break a young horse into work I always put him alongside some steady old-timer for the first month or two. There is some danger of slowing him down from his natural pace in this, but the colt gains a lot in steadiness and dependableness. A steady old horse calms down a colt's fears wonderfully.

He learns that there are no dangers lurking along the roads or behind gates and bridges when he gets his first training in team with an older animal.

Harsh treatment won't educate the colt. It merely makes him excited and so nervous that he cannot understand what you want him to do. Few colts are willfully stubborn; they simply don't understand what is wanted. Some allowance must always be made for the natural high-spiritedness of a young and lively animal.

I do not throw away the whip when I start breaking a colt. I know there are a great many good horsemen who do. I know, too, that there are a number who do not. The whip has its uses—in moderation. Just a touch of the lash is all that is needed. There is no sense in bringing in a colt with welts across his back and along his hips. Let him feel, however, that you can punish when punishment is needed.

I believe that a good many draft colts are spoiled by trainers who do not know how to use the voice in training a youngster. The horseman depends greatly on his voice for mastery and control of his mount. The voice of the rider or driver should always be kept under control. A dumb animal can detect anger, nervousness and uncertainty in a voice, and even the ignorant colt feels that something is very much wrong with the man who storms and yells at him.

In hitching the colt to any vehicle or implement for the first time, give him an opportunity to become acquainted with it. When he has had a good look at it, the wheels and gearing do not seem nearly so alarming.

In the spring there are usually a few days when the colt can be taken out and accustomed to the harness, and to driving in harness with another animal. I try to take advantage of odd times when I have a youngster to break, as it saves time when he is needed in the future.

LOADING OR UNLOADING RACK

Four Posts Set Firmly in Ground and With Strong Pin in Each Will Aid Farmer Greatly.

In the manner illustrated one man may easily load or unload a rack. Set four posts solidly in the ground and nail a strip of 1 by 4 to the side of each, with a block between post and strip at top and bottom thick enough that a 2 by 4 will slide easily between, writes W. B. Hoag in the Farmers' Mail and Breeze. Bore a row of holes through post and strip, and provide a strong pin for each post. When rack is to be unloaded drive wagon in between the posts, then slide the 2 by

Rack Lifter.

4's (C, C) close up under rack and insert the pins. Then, using the 2 by 4's as levers, raise the rack, one corner at a time, as high as convenient, and hold there with the pin. Raise each corner in turn until rack is high enough to clear the standards, then drive out and leave it high and dry. When rack is wanted again, back the wagon under it and reverse the operation.

Greenhouse Forcing.

An interesting phase of modern greenhouse forcing is that the summer months are often the best months. The largest return from most vegetable houses of the north is during the month of July. Both tomatoes and cucumbers are sold from greenhouses in numerous quantities during July, and the prices are usually good and the expenses low. Very little fuel is needed to grow the spring and summer crops and the large amount of sunshine helps to secure a full setting of tomatoes and cucumbers.

Prime Bacon.

Prime bacon is really more credit to the producer than is lard alone. It is also true that the best bacon brings good prices, costs less to bring to fitness, and can be made a great staple if we work for it.

Potato Seed.

Potato growers in the south should get northern grown seed every other year. Northern grown seed comes from the natural home of the potato and possesses greater vigor than that grown in the south.

Kaffir Corn Fodder.

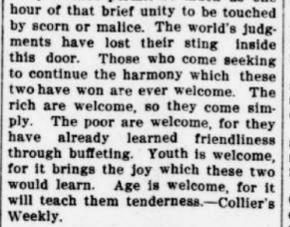

Kaffir corn fodder has about the same feeding value as corn fodder, and can be used in the same way.

MOTTO FOR CHRISTIAN HOME

Ideals Which Consistently Lived Up to, Cannot Fail to Make for Happiness in Life.

This home is dedicated to good will. It grew out of love. The two heads of the household were called together by a power higher than they. To its decree they are obedient. Every tone of the voice, every thought of their being, is subdued to that service. They desire to be worthy of their high calling, as ministers of that grace. They know their peace will go unbroken only for a little time. And often they suspect that the time will be more short even than their anxious hope. They cannot permit so much as one hour of that brief unity to be touched by scorn or malice. The world's judgments have lost their sting inside this door. Those who come seeking to continue the harmony which these two have won are ever welcome. The rich are welcome, so they come simply. The poor are welcome, for they have already learned friendliness through buffeting. Youth is welcome, for it brings the joy which these two would learn. Age is welcome, for it will teach them tenderness.—Collier's Weekly.

BAD CASE OF HEMORRHOIDS

Okalona, Ark.—"I had a bad case of itching and burning piles, and tried many remedies without relief. I could not sleep nor rest at night. The affected parts were irritated, also inflamed, and my family physician said I would have to undergo an operation."

"I bathed good with Cuticura Soap in pure water about fifteen minutes, then I applied the Cuticura Ointment. I did this four times a day for two weeks, then three times a day for another week, and in the space of three weeks I was cured sound and well. One box of Cuticura Ointment with Cuticura Soap cured my case of piles of six years' standing. When I commenced to use the Cuticura Soap and the Cuticura Ointment, I only weighed one hundred and twenty-eight pounds. Now I weigh one hundred and eighty-eight pounds." (Signed) Floyd Welch, Dec. 11, 1911.

What They Trusted.

Having ascertained his weight on the railway station weighing machine the man said to the porter:

"Isn't it a lack of business foresight to put one of those machines that distributes prizes to persons who guess their own weight correctly, hang up against other scales that they could get weighed on before hand, and thus guess on a sure thing? You must have great faith in human nature, you?"

"Oh, no, sir," said the porter, "but we have in the machine."

British Seamen's Thrift.

For the years 1855 to 1912 the number of British seamen's money orders issued at ports in the United Kingdom and abroad was 3,365,489, of the value of over £19,000,000. On March 31 last, only 742 of these orders remained unpaid, their value being £7,966. The total amount of seamen's wages transmitted home between 1878 and 1912 was £5,500,000, and the amount transmitted foreign between 1894 and 1912 was over £1,000,000.—"Shipping" Illustrated.

Packing Food in Ferns.

In Germany the use of ferns is coming into more and more favor for packing food which is transported either short or long distances. The practice became common in England before it gained equal vogue in Germany, and the results are said to be excellent, especially in shipping fresh fruit, butter, fish and other food products which require unusual care.

MOODY LADY NOT MOODY

For Five Years Miss Davis of Moody Was in Terrible Plight, But She Is Now in Fine Spirits.

Moody, Tex.—In an interesting letter from this place, Miss Cora Davis, of R. F. D. No. 6, Box 20, writes as follows:

"I had been taking different medicines for the past five years, without any relief, and last spring my system was so completely run down, and I felt so tired and nervous all the time, hardly felt like staying out of bed."

Friends advised me try Cardui, the woman's tonic, and after taking six bottles, I felt like an entirely different person.

I was relieved of my nervousness, and bad headaches, and could sleep soundly all night—something I hadn't done for years.

I also gained 18 pounds in weight after taking Cardui, and am in better spirits, and feel better, than I have felt for five years.

I cannot say enough in behalf of Cardui. It is the grandest medicine ever discovered, and a God-send to all suffering women and girls."

We do not ask you to accept our statements as to the merits of Cardui, the woman's tonic.

We receive thousands of letters, similar to the above, from grateful ladies, every year, telling what this medicine has done for them, and giving us permission to publish their letters.

He Filled the Bill.

A stranger when dining at a foreign hotel, says the Boston Traveler, was accosted by a detective, who said to him: "Beg your pardon; we are in search of an escaped convict, and, as a matter of form, will you oblige us by showing your passport?"

"Do I look like a convict?"

"Possibly not. In any case I shall require to see your passport."

The stranger, feeling annoyed, presented the officer with the bill of fare and the latter commenced to read: "Sheep's head, neck of mutton, pig's feet."

"Very good," he observed, "the description tallies. You will please come along with us."

No Nostalgia.

H. Atterbury Smith, who with his open stairway plan promises to revolutionize the tenement house, said in New York:

"The open stairway tenement, with its abundance of sunshine and fresh air, will make a tenement apartment actually a home. The tenement dweller of the future needn't feel like Capt. Salt."

"I've sailed the seas for 57 years," Capt. Salt, a seasoned old "shellback," boasted.

"Don't you ever get homesick, captain?" a lady asked.

"Homesick? Me homesick?" said Capt. Salt. "No-sir-ee! I ain't home enough for that."

Julius Caesar.

The almost unanimous verdict of ancient and modern times is to the effect that Julius Caesar was what Shakespeare calls him: "The foremost man of all this world." Never before or since has anyone exhibited in so high a degree all the qualities of a born ruler of men. And never had any man a grander, role to play. To preside over the most important crisis in the history of the human race was a task that none but the greatest of men could successfully perform. Caesar swept one obstacle after another aside, and stood at last where he meant to stand.

Unpicked Grapes Go to the Poor.

A curious old law, which dates from 1779, has been used to sentence the owner of a vineyard at Capetang, near Beziers, France, to a fine and costs for picking her own grapes. She was picking the grapes which had been left on the vines in her vineyard after the fall gathering, when the policeman told her that she was committing an offense against the law, as all grapes left on the vines after the harvest were the property of the poor. The court at Beziers confirmed the policeman's opinion, and the woman was convicted.

Poetry and Music.

If I had to live my life again I would have made a rule to read some poetry and listen to some music at least once every week; for perhaps the parts of my brain now atrophied would thus have been kept active through use. The loss of these tastes is a loss of happiness, and may possibly be injurious to the intellect, and more probably to the moral character, by enfeebling the emotional part of our nature.—Charles Darwin.
