RAILROAD BILL IS UP TO PRES. SOON

IT IS BELIEVED THAT THE PRESIDENT WILL SIGN THE MEASURE.

CHALLENGE IS ACCEPTED

Director General Hines is Preparing Detailed Report Covering the Period of Government Operation—Will Be Made Public.

Washington. — President Wilson is expected to act upon the railroad bill. The prevailing belief is that he will sign, although the president, of course, has not indicated his position in advance. Attorney General Palmer plus his O. K. on the bill also. His opinion was that it contained no constitutional defects. The measure was then relayed to Director General Hines for his position. It is due back at the White House all set for the president's pen.

Opponents of the bill are talking of attacking it in the courts on the grounds of unconstitutionality following the line of argument in the memorial presented by the railroad unions. But the real fight against it will be in the realm of politics. The Republican Publicity Association recognized this. Through its president, Jonathan Bourne Jr., it issued a statement that the question of government ownership will be fought out in the elections next November.

"That this issue will be placed before the country in such a way that the people will have an opportunity to express their views is indicated by the aggressive action taken by the American Federation of Labor and by their group particularly advocating the Plumb plan, in preparing for the political campaign of 1920," said the statement. "It is announced these two groups will oppose the re-election of every senator and congressman who voted for the bill. The 1920 election therefore presents the opportunity for a referendum on the question of government ownership."

"While it is the right of the railroad brotherhoods to advocate the Plumb plan, it is equally the right and duty of all of the rest of the people of the country to advocate no less vigorously what, in their opinion will be for the best interests of the country, now and hereafter."

Director General Hines is preparing a detailed report covering the period of government operation, which will be made public. It goes into specific questions of public interest.

OIL LEASE BILL PASSED AT LAST

NATIONAL RESOURCES ON GOVERNMENT LAND WILL NOW BE DEVELOPED RAPIDLY.

COAL IS ITS CHIEF FEATURE

Conditions Under Which This Fuel and Oil May Be Prospected For and Taken From the Public Domain.

By JAMES P. HORNADAY.

Washington.—After some years of parleying congress has finally agreed on the conditions under which the government will permit the mining of coal, oil, gas, phosphate and sodic on the public domain. The bill agreed to is commonly known as the oil leasing bill. It is the expectation of congress that under the legislation the natural resources to which it relates will be developed rapidly. The attempt to fix conditions under which the government would permit the taking of coal, oil, gas, etc., from lands owned by it was started away back in the Roosevelt administration. In every congress since that time the subject has been up. A pending piece of legislation relates to the development of waterpower on the public domain. It seems likely that this legislation will also be perfected at this session.

Perhaps most interest in the legislation that has just been completed centers in the conditions under which coal is to be taken from the public domain. All the arrangements for taking coal as well as the other deposits covered by the legislation will have to be made with the secretary of the interior. The first step toward the development of the government-owned coal land will be to subdivide this land into leasing tracts of 40 acres each or multiples thereof. In no case will anyone leasing tract contain more than 2,500 acres. Leases are to be awarded by competitive bidding. There are some provisos or exceptions written into the legislation. For instance, where prospecting or exploratory work is necessary to determine the existence or workability of coal deposits, the secretary of the interior may issue a prospecting permit for a term of two years for not exceeding 2,500 acres; and if within that period the permittee shows to the secretary that the land contains coal in commercial quantities, he is to be entitled to a lease.

Restrictions on Railroads.

No lease of coal land is to be approved or issued until after a notice of thirty days has been given in a newspaper of general circulation in the county in which the lands or deposits are situated. There is also a provision that no railroad shall be permitted to hold a lease to mine coal on the public domain except for its own use; and no railroad company can receive more than one permit or lease for each 200 miles of its railroad line within the state in which the coal land is situated.

Women Seek Equal Chances.

Women, through the woman's bureau of the department of labor, are moving to obtain equality of opportunity in the government service. Last fall this bureau arranged to make a study of positions in the government service open by examination to women as compared with those closed to women. The study was begun in September. On November 5, ten days after receiving a partial report from the bureau, the civil service commission passed a ruling opening all examinations to both women and men, leaving it to the discretion of the appointing officers to specify the sex desired when requesting certification of eligibles.

The largest employer of labor in the country and the employer of the greatest variety of labor, the United States government, has as its employment agent the civil service commission. This commission is responsible for securing the proper person for almost every position in the government service except those of unskilled labor in some states, and those filled by presidential appointment. The appointment of women to any government position is still regulated by a statute written in 1870, which declared that women may in the discretion of the head of any department be appointed to any of the clerkships therein authorized by law. From this statute has sprung the custom of opening examinations to both sexes or closing them to either sex at the discretion of the head of any department, regardless of the fact that neither rule nor law covers the examination itself.

Barring women or men from any examination, however, bars them not only from the special occupation for which the examination is given but from all kindred occupations. All other bureaus which may require services of the same or like quality as those specified in the examination are confined to a register made up exclusively of one sex when the opposite sex may be as acceptable or preferable; or they must ask for a special examination in which no sex line is drawn; or they must seek the woman or man desired among those already in the government service.

Coal Leases Indeterminate.

Leases are to be for indeterminate periods on condition of diligent development and continued operation of the mine, except when operation shall be interrupted by strikes. At the end of each 20-year period the secretary of the interior may require a readjustment of terms and conditions.

No Big Military Legislation Likely.

It looks now as if the United States would continue to drift so far as preparedness for possible war is concerned. The immediate enactment of military legislation of importance is not probable. At the present time not much interest is being taken by the men who frame the laws in the construction program proposed by the navy department. An inquiry into the situation that exists in congress with respect to military and naval legislation shows that most of the congressmen have got an impression that there is a distinct reaction throughout the country against military or naval legislation and for this reason, and this reason alone, they are disinclined to support any great forward step of a military or naval nature.

KEEP UP YOUR CONFIDENCE.

The majority of failures began to deteriorate by doubting or depreciating themselves or by losing confidence in their own ability. The moment you harbor doubt and begin to lose faith in yourself you capitulate to the enemy. Every time you acknowledge weakness, inefficiency or lack of ability you weaken your self-confidence, and that is to undermine the very foundation of all achievement.—Orison Swett Marden in Chicago Daily News.

No sooner was the senate bill with its universal training provision out in the open than the members of the house, regardless of political affiliations, began to let it be known that they were opposed to universal training in any form. On the Republican side the leader, Representative Mondell of Wyoming, came out flatfooted against the training feature of the senate bill and his position was supported by the members of the house committee on order of business. The effect of this was to discourage the house committee on military affairs from going ahead with the idea that it should report a bill providing for universal training. The Democrats of the house, with the notion that they could gain some political advantage by taking a stand as a unit against universal training, caucused and almost unanimously voted to oppose this training. This action was taken after President Wilson had written the caucus a letter asking it not to take a stand against universal training.

War Department Will Suffer.

The upshot of it all is that the leaders have decided not to try to get through universal training legislation at this session. They believe the main features of the Wadsworth bill will eventually be accepted by the country and by congress, but they realize, so they say, that nothing, perhaps, could be gained by putting that bill through the senate at this session and sending it to the house to be slaughtered.

The uprising in congress against military legislation leaves the war department in a most unsatisfactory condition. It had counted on legislation by the end of the fiscal year providing for the peace military establishment. Now it will have to go along in a makeshift way until congress acts. Meantime nearly all the new branches of the service that were built up during the war, like aviation, motor corps, gas and flame, etc., are rapidly deteriorating for lack of funds. Between now and the end of the fiscal year, June 30, the regular army appropriation bill will be passed and it is the thought of the men in congress who are dealing with the situation to make provision in that bill for tiding the department over until a permanent policy shall have been decided on.
