

PARISH NEWS.

Happy Jack.

Last Saturday morning at St. Patrick's church, at Home Place, the marriage of Miss Ellen Chedville and Mr. Eustice Baylie was celebrated at half past ten o'clock. Rev. Veil officiated. The bride who is the daughter of Mr. Prosper Chedville, one of our highly esteemed citizens, was lovely in her bridal dress of white mull and lace, the long veil of illusion was caught in cap effect by a spray of orange blossoms. She carried white roses and asparagus fern. Her attendants were Miss Ouida Baylie, maid of honor, Miss May Chedville and Miss Louella Rousselle, bridesmaids. The groom, who is an upright and industrious young man, is the son of Mr. Chas. Baylie of Jesuits Bend, and is well worthy of the prize he has won. His attendants were Mr. Pete Chedville, best man, Messrs. Rene Rousselle and Emile Martin, groomsmen. Mr. and Mrs. Baylie, who were the recipients of many beautiful presents, left on the evening train for their home in Jesuits Bend in a shower of rice and good wishes.

Miss Ouida Baylie is spending some time with the Misses Chedville.

Miss Daisy Rigaud is attending the summer normal at Tulane University.

The Potash boys and girls all attended the ball at Arnolie Saturday night and had a delightful time.

Master Chedville Martin is spending some time with his grandfather, Mr. Prosper Chedville.

Ball Game at Buras.

Last Sunday the Buras Jr., and the Home Place base ball teams played the best game of the season at Buras. The Buras team had the best of the game all through, but the Home Place boys put up a strong fight, which resulted in a victory for the Buras team. The score was 11-10. The game was one of the best that has been played this season. The feature of the game was the fine pitching of Jules Brey, Jr., of the Buras team, it was chiefly through him that the game went to Buras. The Home Place pitcher also pitched a fine game. The Home Place team was slightly the better team in the field. The next time these two teams meet the game will be worth going to see.

A young man called on a doctor complaining of pains in his stomach. The doctor diagnosed the case as dyspepsia and advised the patient to go home and try a diet of rice. If he could keep that on his stomach, he was to report to the doctor the next morning. The next day the patient returned and when he asked him if he could keep the rice on his stomach he replied: "I could as long as I stand awake, but when I fell asleep it rolled off."

A traveling man stopped at an Indiana hotel. The proprietor told him he had not a room in the house. The man protested. He must have a room. Finally the proprietor told him there was a room, a little room separated by a thin partition from a nervous man, a man who had lived in the house for ten years.

"He is so nervous," said the land lord, "I don't dare put any one in that room. The least noise might give him a nervous spell that would endanger his life."

"Oh, give me a room," said the traveler, "I'll be so quiet he'll not know I'm there."

The room was given the traveler. He slipped in noiselessly and began to disrobe. He took off one article of clothing after another as quietly as a burglar. At last he came to his shoes. He unlaced a shoe and then, manlike, dropped it.

The shoe fell to the floor with a great noise. The offending traveler horrified at what he had done, waited to hear from the nervous man. Not a sound. He took off the second shoe and placed it noiselessly upon the floor; then in absolute silence finished undressing and crawled between the sheets.

Half an hour went by. He had dropped into a doze when there came a tremendous knocking on the partition.

The traveler sat up in bed trembling and dismayed. "What's the matter?"

Then came the voice of the nervous man.

"Hang you! Drop that other shoe, will you?"

A good deal is being said just at this time about the fly lugging around with him and depositing them wherever it suits his pleasure, which unfortunately, is almost always on some commodity intended for human food. Guess there is a good deal in it too. At any rate butchers, and all who handle food commodities would confer a favor by keeping their stock beyond the reach of the pesky fly. A dealer in food supplies, who would make it known that his stock was carefully guarded against contamination, would soon find that he would do more business than the man who parades his goods to incidentally serve as fly roosts.—Ex.

Boys who smoke cigarettes are like wormy apples. They drop long before the harvest time. They rarely make failures in after life because they don't have any after life. The boy who begins smoking before his fifteenth year never reaches the life of the world. When the other boys are taking hold of the world's work he is concerned with the sexton and the undertaker.

Tropics Furnish Tubercular Cure.

N. O. Picayune:

Experiments covering a wide field in Central America have demonstrated that poisonous venom from certain reptiles, and especially the crocodile, rattlesnake, or rattlesnake, will arrest the progress of the tubercular bacillus and ultimately destroy it, at the same time effecting a healing of the lung tissue destroyed, according to a statement given out by Charles G. Second, M. D., Ph. G., of the University of Nebraska, who has been in charge of the experimental work. Dr. Second spent Wednesday in New Orleans en route to Washington, and was a guest at the Hotel Grunewald.

Dr. Second said that the theory along which he had been working was also being worked out by other scientists in different parts of the country and Europe. He modestly agreed, however, that to the best of his belief no other scientist has taken the work so far as to arrive at definite conclusions which are capable of being practically worked out. Unlike Dr. Friedmann, with his turtle vaccine, Dr. Second declared that he will make public his discovery and that it shall be used for the benefit of all mankind.

"During the past three years I have tested the cure and found it efficient," he said. "I have experimented with many snakes and spiders, injecting the venom secured into animals and, afterwards, persons. In no case has there been a bad result, but, to the contrary, every patient treated has shown marked improvement from the first day of treatment and many have been cured."

The venom, Dr. Second said, is hyperdermically injected into the arm of the patient and that each injection consists of minute particles of the poison of the reptiles, a dose consisting of from one half to one milligram, according to the stage of the disease and the strength of the patient. It would require from one to two grains to produce death, he explained.

The venom from the small black spider found in Latin American countries and familiar to every traveler in the tropics, Dr. Second declared, possesses curative powers in the treatment of tuberculosis and certain nervous diseases not found in any other remedy. The spider is the little black one with a small red spot in its back, and supposed by all natives and foreigners to be nothing less than the black death. "When the venom is extracted from the living reptile it is subjected to an evaporating process and the dry residue is the part employed in the treatment, being soluble in glycerin and water."

"I recently treated a male patient suffering with advanced syphilis, this and persistent and profuse blood spitting," Dr. Second said. "He was given half a milligram of the venom, injected into the arm. It causes pain and swelling around the puncture, extending to surrounding parts in a few hours. However, in forty-eight hours all effects had disappeared, cough and expectoration greatly improved and he had gained in strength. Within two months he was able to resume light work."

"Another case selected for experimentation was that of a man of 40 years of age, who was in the second stage of phthisis. He showed dullness in the upper half of the right lung, with mucous and sibilant rales over the same area, while a severe cough and much expectoration, dyspnea, depression and anorexia attended. Strychnine, quinine, hypophosphates, cod liver oil, nutritious diet and rest failed to bring about an improvement in his condition. Following injections of the venom, however, his recovery was rapid, and for a year he has been able to follow his vocation of making shoes."

Dr. Second declared that he has demonstrated to his own satisfaction that the venom of the most despised and feared reptiles contain some of nature's most subtle and useful serums—"useful," he said, "as a practical specific for some of the most dreaded diseases."

The venom, Dr. Second said, has been used by him successfully in the treatment of neuralgia of the fifth nerve, in cervical-brachial neuralgia and other diseases of the nervous system.

"Epilepsy can be cured by the use of snake venom, and pernicious blood poisons and malignant fevers may be successfully treated by its judicious use."

Dr. Second said that he will put the result of his discoveries before the medical profession.

In a certain mining town there is a physician who is most heartily loved by the men who he attends and who has their confidence to a remarkable degree. One day after an explosion in the mine, the doctor, as usual, was among the first on the scene, and carefully examined each man as the victims were brought out. Finally one big Scotchman was carried out, still unconscious from the force of the explosion. The physician looked at him and said, "Poor Jamie. I'm afraid he's dead."

At that moment Jamie had a gleam of consciousness and said faintly: "No Doctor, I'm not dead yet."

"His hearers, shocked at his lack of confidence in their loved physician, looked at him indignantly and one of them burst out: "Hard ver tongue, the noo, Jamie. Do ye think ye know better than the doctor."
