Selling Oranges in Cuba.

OUR readers will remember the good old days when our leading luggermen came down on the Lower Coast and bought the orange crops in the field, paying a quarter or half the contract purchase price down in cash, the rest to be paid when the oranges were taken away. Of course this old familiar method was somewhat hazardous to both parties, as oranges might rule high in price and some sellers in this way realize less than they would for their oranges had they held them until fully matured. On the other hand, the buyers, who were prudent, careful men, thoroughly conversant with the business and in active competition with each other, would generally pay as high prices for such oranges thus bought, as they could afford to.

There are some objections to the methods, however, apart from the method of purchase. One was the rather rude, careless handling that such oranges received as they were knocked about more or less and carried to the luggers and dumped into great piles in the luggers and then transported to the city and handled there similarly again.

These conditions have all been removed and oranges now are sometimes sold while still on the trees to city buyers at an agreed price, either per box or for the whole quantity in the orange orchard. The oranges thus gathered are then carefully handled and generally separated by sizes and put in boxes of standard orange box size and thus put in the most marketable shape and are sometimes wrapped with tissue paper, as is frequently done with foreign oranges, and in fact the whole transaction in oranges in this way has been brought up to its highest development. Some of the producers handle their own oranges, taking all the chances of high or low market and the chances of excellent or indifferent packing and still have been able to do very well.

This leads us to take an interest in the method of selling oranges in Cuba. In a recent edition of the Cuban-American reference is made to sales of oranges at La Gloria, Cuba, where the orange crops produced by the Americans are practically all sold to Cuban buyers, who come and buy the fruit on the spot, the price being based either on the orchard run packed at the grove, or delivered at the nearest shipping point on the bay. The oranges are sent thence in small boats in bulk, most to Caidarien, a leading port toward the eastern end of the island and from there the oranges are sent to various points along the railroad. It is said that prices are not what they should be, but the grower benefits greatly by the sales being orchard run, the sellers thus not losing the culls as in shipping north.

It is reported that the present season has been a satisfactory one on the whole, although the prices have been somewhat erratic. The crop, except late varieties, is now cleaned up, prices ranging all the way from $3.50 to $10 per thousand, the price per thousand oranges can hardly imply that the oranges were actually counted, but that a given space would ordinarily result in a given number of oranges of any given size and hence the number of thousands of oranges in any given purchase is probably determined by the space occupied, but the Cuban-American does not state just how this is done, but simply reports the price per thousand.

In case of dissolution or termination of this corporation, either by limitation of its charter or from any cause, the liquidation of its affairs shall be conducted by two commissioners selected from the stockholders, with like assent and at a meeting called for that purpose, as above set forth in this article.

Said commissioners shall remain in office until the affairs of said corporation shall have been fully liquidated. In case of the death of one or more of said commissioners the survivor or survivors shall continue to act.

ARTICLE VII.

The holders of all or any part of the shares of the capital stock of this corporation shall have the right from time to time at their discretion to create and form a voting trust.

ARTICLE VIII.

No stockholder of this corporation shall ever be held liable or responsible for the contracts or faults thereof in any further sum than the unpaid balance due the company on the shares of stock subscribed for or owned by him; nor shall any informality in organization have the effect of rendering this charter null, or of exposing a stockholder to any liability beyond the unpaid balance, if any, of his stocks.

Thus done and passed, at my notarial office in the City of New Orleans on the day, month and year hereinabove first written in the presence of Julia Frick and Henry J. Campbell, competent witnesses, who hereunto sign their names, with the said appearers, and me, Notary, after due and full reading of the whole. (Original Signed)
