Chinese View of Love.

MARRIAGE A BUSINESS OF THE HEAD,
NOT AN AFFAIR OF THE HEART.
(Ng Poon Chew, in Chinese Annual.)

Perhaps there is no greater difference existing between the Chinese and the American people than that between their ideas of love. In fact, we Chinese do not believe in love, for we are not sickly, sentimental creatures, but cold, philosophical beings. We arrange our matrimonial affairs through hard reasoning and not through the tender passion.

To us marriage is a serious business of the head, and not a light affair of the heart. In these matrimonial transactions we apply the most rigid, keen, calculating business principles, and that is why we are so successful in the marriage enterprise, as we have never been bunced by Cupid at the game of love.

We never pay homage at the altar of this stupid, brainless, yellow kid, the disturber of peace, the breaker of hearts, the destroyer of homes and the promoter of affinity stock companies. We cannot tolerate his presence in China, as China is not a land of lovers. Consequently the cool, quiet hours of our midsummer nights are not disturbed or spoiled by hot air from the wooing and cooing of sentimental creatures.

We do not believe in love, for love is not the greatest thing in the world. It is not even a thing nor substance. It is simply the product of an idle brain, the outgrowth of a drowsy mind. It is inconstant and unsubstantial, for its quantitative and qualitative character changes with the changes of scenery and environment, and its drawing and binding power increases or decreases as the square of the distance between subject and object increases or decreases, as the case may be.

Love is the antithesis of reason, for man sees with reason and only feels with love, and it is the most violent form of brainstorm. Love is a system of a disordered brain, as a nightmare is a system of a disordered stomach. It is a deadly contagious disease, for it turns the strongest head and makes the wisest men a fool. Indeed, there is no fool like an old fool who is affected with amoritis. When a man has contracted this love disease and is under its influence he acts in the most idiotic manner and performs all sorts of antics, all of which he entirely renounces and repudiates when he is free from its hypnotic spell.

Now are we peculiar because we do not agree with you in regard to the idea of love? But alas! the world is changing, and China is changing with its old-time proven ideas are fast giving way to the new, and our young people are being converted to the worship of the blind god, and from now on there will likely be more love in our courtships and divorces in our matrimony.

Medicines that aid nature are always most effectual. Chamberlain's Cough Remedy acts on this plan. It allays the cough, relieves the lungs, opens the secretions and aids nature in restoring the system to a healthy condition. Thousands have testified to its superior excellence. Sold by all druggists.

Cure For Sleeplessness.

If one is restless and cannot sleep at night, take a common towel, double it four times, dip in cold water and pin around the waist with a dry towel on the outside. For croup or sore throat, put the towel around the neck and they will give almost immediate relief. M. C. Review.

A Girl's Wild Midnight Ride.

To warn people of a fearful forest fire in the Catahoula a young girl rode horseback at midnight and saved many lives. Her deed was glorious but lives are often saved by Dr. King's New Discovery in curing lung troubling, coughs and colds, which might have ended in consumption or pneumonia. "It cured me of a dreadful cough and lung disease," writes W. R. Patterson, Wellington, Tex., "after four in our family had died with consumption, and I gained 87 pounds." Nothing so sure and safe for all throat and lung troubles. Price 50c and $1.00. Trial bottles free. Guaranteed by all druggists.

BAD PRACTICE.

Of all the contemptible things on earth is the slander by insinuation or otherwise.

Slander of any kind is base enough, but when a man or woman slanders another, gives what they understand to be the facts and tell who they are talking about, they are not so awfully bad as the one, who, by a side remark and nod of the head or wink of the eye, places calumny on another, they are not only slanderers, but they are moral and physical cowards as well. The man who calls names, and yet utters what he has reason to believe may be untrue about another, is mean enough, the Lord knows, but has at least a shade of honesty about him, in that he lets people know who is being talked about.

It is to be regretted that one of the frailties of human nature is to revel in slander—that is, it is so with many people. There are those living all over this country when they hear an idle piece of gossip, reflecting upon the good names of some man or woman, roll it as a sweet morsel under their tongues, and if the person about whom they hear something injurious said, happens to be someone they don't like it is told with added zest.

The good deeds of people are written in the sands, but the mistakes they make are sometimes proclaimed from the house tops, and often the person at whom such spite is aimed has not been guilty of the wrong charged, and still more often the party who is sought to be injured has a better character than the one who talks about them.

How often has some good man been slandered, but worse still, how often has the vile tongue of insinuation been directed against the best and purest of God's creation—some lady.

There is an impersonal factor that figures in all cases of this kind. It looms up before the horizon like a brutal giant, and does more harm than any one person can do. Because it is impersonal, it has a vile reputation and cannot well be located. It is embraced in the two words, "They say."

Who says? No one can tell, or if they can they won't.

The only remedy for such inanimate monstrosities as "they say," is to make the party using it tell who "they are" or stop repeating it.

Long ago there was a saying something like this: "Be careful how you speak, of whom you speak, and when and where."—Meridian (Miss.) Dispatch.
