

Eruptions

Dry, moist, scaly tetter, all forms of eczema or salt rheum, pimples and other cutaneous eruptions proceed from humors, either inherited, or acquired through defective digestion and assimilation.

To treat these eruptions with drying medicines is dangerous.

The thing to do is to help the system discharge the humors, and to strengthen it against their return.

Hood's Sarsaparilla permanently cured J. G. Hines, Frank, Ill., of eczema, from which he had suffered for some time; and Miss Alvina Wolter, Box 212, Alcona, Wis., of pimples on her face and back and chafed skin on her body, by which she had been greatly troubled. There are more testimonials in favor of this great medicine than can be published.

Hood's Sarsaparilla

Promises to cure and keeps the promise. No longer put off treatment. Buy a bottle of Hood's today.

PRESS ON.

PARK BENJAMIN.

Press on! surmount the rocky steep,
Climb boldly o'er the torrent's arch;
He falls alone who feebly creep!
He wins who dares the hero's march;
Be thou a hero! let thy might
Tramp on eternal snows its way,
And, through the ebon walls of night,
Hew down a passage unto day.

Press on! if once and twice thy feet
Slip back and stumble, harder try;
From him who never dreads to meet
Danger and death, they're sure to fly.
To onward ranks the bulwark speeds,
While on their breast who never quail,
Gleams, guardian of chivalric deeds,
Bright courage, like a coat of mail.

Press on! if Fortune play the false
Today, tomorrow he'll be true;
Whom now she sinks, she now exalts,
Taking old gifts and granting new.
The wisdom of the present hour
Makes up the follies past and gone,
To weakness, strength succeeds, and power
From frailty springs! Press on, press on.

Therefore, press on, and reach the goal,
And gain the prize, and wear the crown;
Faint not, for to the steadfast soul
Come wealth, and honor, and renown.
To thine own self be true, and keep
Thy mind from sloth, thy heart from soil,
Press on, and thou shalt surely reap
A heavenly harvest for thy toil.

We attended the last night of Prof. Byrd's High School and were highly entertained. The young ladies and young gentlemen all did well, in our humble judgment, in the closing exercises, and deserved all the honors they won in the way of medals and diplomas. Prof. Aswell said many good things to them in his address, and gave quite an amusing story illustrating these rapid days of educating the youths and lasses, and the cheap diploma business. We add, not only does it apply to buying diplomas for uneducated boys and girls, but to the shepherds for D.D.'s and L.L.D.'s that are now thrust upon men of money and influence, regardless of a well trained mind. I shall have to give you the story Prof. Aswell told us that evening, though I shall not tell it exactly in the professor's language nor as briefly:

A rather ingenious young boy who, doubtless, had read or heard of the creation of Adam from dust, concluded he would make him a man, likewise out of dust, or mud, or wet dust if you like it better; and it was mud all the same; and so this boy told his companions to come and watch him make the man and be on hand when the fellow should be ready to get up and walk away. So he carefully moulded his mud into the image of a man—feet, legs, arms and body. Unfortunately, night set in just as he was putting the finishing touches to the head, and he had to stop and go home, promising himself to come early the next morning and complete his immortal piece of work, breathe into it the breath of life and let it become a living soul. During the night some envious and mean boys came and destroyed his man. When the next morning came the little fellow was there early, but also to find his man gone. He then began to soliloquize thusly to himself: "Well, he just got tired of waiting for me and has come to life during the night, and has walked off somewhere." So he began to look up and down the road to find his masterpiece. Presently a young professor, with rather an ill shaped head, who was teaching school in the neighborhood, came along on his way to the school house. The boy saw him and said to himself: "I bet there he is coming now. But no, he doesn't look exactly like the man I made. I believe it is, though, for perhaps he has changed color since coming to life. Yes, I know it is him, for that head don't look finished." So he followed the professor up the road, talking all the while to himself about the man he had made the night before, and how, now that he had come to life and was walking about, it would amaze his boy friends very much. He followed the professor so closely that it began to annoy him somewhat, when finally he turned around abruptly and exclaimed: "You little fool, what are you following me for?" The boy then said: "What did you go off for before I fixed your head?"

The moral of this story is—as we can all well see—that diplomas do not always fix the head.

CONFEDERATE REUNION.

Diverged Views of Vets From Memphis.

The Confederate re-union, as it is styled, is over. There was a big crowd in Memphis and the Memphians are rejoicing over their success.

But why should such a gathering be misnamed a Confederate reunion? Here in substance is the recital of Vets who were there:

Said a Vet, who is one of a general's staff: "It was a grand, a most successful gathering. The streets were jammed with people and the old Vets were welcomed everywhere. The Louisiana division was conspicuous in the parade and received cheers all along the line. I was well treated, delightfully entertained, as were my friends and others who were with me." Said a Vet who, as a free lance and wears no uniform: "I went to Memphis to see the show. I was not disappointed. It was a great show, where the old Confederate soldier, without uniform, was 'lost in the shuffle.' In many instances he had to shift for himself, but, this could not be avoided when so great a crowd is gathered in a town. But I may say I never saw as many generals, and colonels, they were everywhere, and as to majors and captains, why they appeared to be more numerous than the privates, but they were all happy in their glory and their tailor-made uniforms."

Said a Vet, cool headed, conservative, unassuming, observant, intelligent, a gentleman of great influence, who has had years of experience in dealing with men and who appreciates the weakness as well as the noble characteristics of men: "Memphis was crowded; the streets were jammed. The entertainments were many. I sauntered everywhere I am as familiar with Memphis as I am with Shreveport. The citizens of Memphis responded nobly and generously, and should be credited for their efforts, but the reunion was disappointing to the Veterans, at least to the great majority. The reunion was a big show, where the officers in uniform overshadowed the soldiers, and as was said by a friend in Memphis, an old Reb: 'The whole thing has run from generals to sponsors, and maids of honor, and Sons of Veterans, and we are not in it.'"

Several entertainments which were billed for the Vets were postponed because these interfered with some social functions. I have reached the conclusion that the reunion was a great success for Memphis, for the generals and the officers, the sponsors, the maids of honor and the Sons of Veterans, but a grand humbug, at least as far as the Veterans are concerned.
