Office in the Cooper Building. Dr. Allen is a graduate of both schools and carries a full line of homeopathic remedies. Special attention to chronic diseases.

Will Dutton Captain L. S. U. Football Team.

Thos. W. Dutton has been elected captain of the Louisiana State Tigers for 1913. The team will be one of the strongest that ever represented the L. S. U., practically every man with the team this season will be back next year.

Dutton is one of the most popular students at L. S. U., and the Tigers are pleased to know he will captain next year's team. He was the only man on the L. S. U. squad given a place on the "All Southern" team by the leading coaches.

Dutton played center all of the past season. Dutton is a fine athlete, having won honors for himself and his home town, Minden, when he was going to the high school there. During the High School Meet held there in 1910 he won first in all the events he was in, and helped Minden win the cup. He has made a splendid athletic record at the university, and has come out winner in all the events he has been in, and this year he has been one of the mainstays of Dwyer in making the line of the Tigers the best in the South.

Dutton has a good head, and his good generalship is expected to play an important part in the L. S. U. games next year. Everybody is Dutton's friend at L. S. U. and he is the idol of the State University. F. G.

Notes and News of Interest

By M. F. W.

It was one Christmas morning. Down beyond Chinatown stood a rickety old tenement, one of the kind that fire and death had scorned to touch.

The Italian who kept the fruit stand on the corner was talking to the policeman on the beat "you had better go up and see about it—she's a lovely little girl. No one knows where that crazy old rag picker got her. The old woman went out at daylight with her bag on her back, and she's locked the child in. It's the gable room back, next to the roof. I'll go with you."

They climbed the snaky stairs, up and up and up. They reached the top floor. The hall was dark. They felt for the door latch. The door was locked. The policeman threw his shoulder up against it and it gave way.

They entered. The room was almost bare of furniture, cold, dirty, unkempt. To the left was a little bed-room about as big as a dry goods box. The policeman was about to enter when he heard a child's voice. He paused and peered in. He saw an empty stocking pinned to the wall at the post of the bed.

Kneeling at the bed side in an attitude of prayer was a little girl. The morning sun sent a luminous ray of light on her head, golden with ringlets. The policeman, big and brave, just stood there. He listened, and these were the words he heard: "Oh, God, you forgot me and Dolly Dimple this time and there ain't no Santa Claus, for my stocking is empty. And I am cold and hungry. Hurry up, please, Mister God, and find my Daddy and my Precious, and I'll be a good girl and never cry any more, even when the old woman whips me!"

And as he listened, the tears began to run down the big policeman's nose. He wrapped little Reddy Ringlets in an old blanket and carried her gently down the stairs, and all the time she held fast to a dirty wax doll.

The old Italian down the street gave the little girl an orange, and at the station house the matron gave her a bag of candy.

Little Reddy Ringlets never found her Daddy or her Precious. Were they caught in the fire, crushed by falling walls, or did they fall victims to some yawning crevasse, no one can say. But now little Reddy Ringlets has a home with a rancher and his good wife, out beyond the hills of Sansitello, and when Christmas comes and she hangs up her stocking it is never empty.—Elbert Hubbard.

Christmas Tree for the Home.

Friends are asked to remember the Christmas tree for the Home for the Homeless. Every year a big, beautiful Christmas tree is laden with gifts for the dear old ladies, and every year they look forward with fresh pleasure to this bright spot in their quiet lives. So friends, please remember the Christmas tree for the "Home."

Pretty Church Wedding.

The marriage of Miss Julia Irene Burgess and Mr. Walter Lawrence Forstner was celebrated at the First Baptist Church Wednesday morning at 11 o'clock.

Palms and ferns, with white Chrysanthemums made the room appropriate and beautiful too. The ceremony was impressively performed by the Rev. Mr. Dodd, pastor of the church.

Love lyrics were sung by Mrs. Susie Collins and Mrs. William Burgess, the beautiful melodies succeeded by Loehengrin's triumphal wedding march, announced the entrance to the bridal party.

Following the ushers, Messrs. Smith, Chapman, Tarlton and Dr. Sartor, came the maid of honor, Miss Grace Burgess, handsomely attired in a toupée charmuse, hat and accessories to match. A bouquet of American Beauty roses gave a pretty touch of color to the costume.

The bride entered with her brother, Mr. William Burgess. She wore a stylish tailored suit of tan whipcord, a handsome plumed hat to match and carried bride roses.

The groom and his best man, Mr. Herman Lauer, of Chicago, stood at the altar.

Mr. and Mrs. Forstner left after the ceremony for their home in Little Rock, where they will be pleasantly located in Hotel Mason. The marriage was witnessed by a large number of friends and by the bride's mother, Mrs. Ossie Burgess and her brothers, Messrs. Jim, Mitchell and W. T. Burgess. Cordial congratulations are extended the happy couple.

Two big boxes and one smaller for the "Infirmarium," were packed at the home of Mrs. Mattie H. Williams on Cotton street, December 7th, and shipped to Camp Nicholls, New Orleans, annual Christmas present from the Shreveport Chapter, U. D. C. This Chapter has for years led in this work, sending earlier and more largely than any Chapter in the State.

The box for the sick was filled with delicacies, wine, tea, chocolate, evaporated milk, crackers, wafers, soup. So, the Christmas cheer will not be lacking to those unable to enjoy the feasting around the Christmas board.

He Couldn't Take It.

When Charlie Tole went to work for the Armour's in Chicago he learned that it was the habit of Philip Armour to get to his desk every morning at 6:30. A month after Tole took his job, Philip returned to town, and the following morning Charlie was at his desk at 6:30 o'clock for the first time in his life.

Mr. Armour walked in at 6:33, pinched himself to see if he was awake and then stared at Tole. Charlie went on with his arduous labors.

"How long have you been working here?" asked the magnate. "Oh, about a month," replied Charlie carelessly.

"So you get down to work at this time every morning?" continued Armour, immensely pleased. "I do," said Charlie, "when you're in town."

"This brutal frankness made a hit with Armour, and always after that Tole was one of his favorites.

When Christmas came he called Charlie into his office, produced a hand some gold watch and chain, handed it to Tole and said graciously: "You have rendered valuable service to this business, and I think it deserves recognition. I give you this as a sign of my appreciation."

Tole took the watch, examined it appreciatively, and then gravely handed it back.

"No," he said slowly. "I'm sorry, but I can't accept that, Mr. Armour."

"Why not?" asked the big man in amazement. "Because," explained Tole, "I've been informed that if you ever give a man a present you never raise his salary."—Popular Magazine.

The Other End.

The recent return from a cruise of the well known Joe Donavaro recalls the story of the way in which he secured his first job. Joe applied to a Boston skipper many years ago for a position on his ship. He asserted boldly that he knew everything which was to be known about a vessel, although he was at that time only a lad of 17.

"Well," said the captain, with a grin, "let's see how much you know. Find me three ends to that rope there and I'll give you a job."

He pointed to a new coil of rope which he had just purchased. Joe eyed the rope a minute and then pointed to the usual two ends.

"There are two of your ends," he said. Then suddenly, before the skipper could stop him, he picked up the rope and heaved it overboard, trying as he watched it disappear. "There's another end to your rope."—Boston Traveler.

Why They Retired.

Two gentlemen who were playing cards at a club recently were annoyed by other members who stood behind their chairs and interested themselves in the game. Finally one of the players asked a spectator to play the hand for him until he returned.

The spectator took the cards, whereupon the first player left the room. Pretty soon the second player followed the example of the first. The two substitutes played for some time, when one of them asked the waiter where the two original players were.

"They are playing cards in the next room, sir," was the waiter's reply.—Tit-Bits.
