Curious .- To see the Administration, in its New Year's congratulations with the Corps diplomatique at Washington, paying especial attention to Senor Marcoletta, as minister from Nicaragua. As Mr. Marcoletta is not accredited from Gen. Walker-the only government now in Central America-he is not supposed to represent any body but himself. No matter what sort of a man Capt. French may be, it is quite certain, at all events, that he represents Gen. Walker. To be telling him to "quit," then at the same time that "especial attention" is being paid to Marcoletta, is one of those sin war anomalies of which this anomalous Administration, in its foreign policy, so often pre-

Beresford, aged fifty-six, was indicited for having, on the 4th of November, at Bradford, uttered a forged endorsement (using the name of Mr-Kaye) of a bill of exchange for the payment of £100, with the intention to defraud Samuel Laycock. It was stated during the trial that the prisoner is brother to Gen. Beresford, now Adjutant-General in India, and the cousin of Lord Dacies and next heir to the title, and holds a living in Cork. His fordship summed up the evidence, and the jury, after a few minutes' deliberation, found the prisoner guility. The sentence of the court was that he he transported for the period of his natural life. The prisoner, who appeared surprised at the extent of his sentence, had to be assisted from the dock.

INTERESTING INFORMATION.

What We All Do.—An amusing an instruc-tive hour may be spent, if one will but search out from the confused figures of the census the number of persons following various oc-cupations in the United States. Thus we res oice, as a nation, in having two thousand perthere are probably not a score who live in men's memories, and certainly not one who appears likely to dethrone Raphael. Of authors we friends of Judge Douglass, notwithstanding the long cherished desire to keep him back for a term or two, have now come to the conclusion that it has become, under all circumstansion that it has become, under all circumstansion that it has become, under all circumstansion that it has become, under all circumstansions are to be credited, every new month gives birth to a new literary star. and one more brilliant than any that ever went before. To pass from bank officers to brokers his star has set—the Little Giant is a Giant no is a natural transition, and of the former we longer. Rome.—According to a recent letter, the population of the city of Rome is 177,461, in 178,500 It was 178,000 It blacksmiths as a make-weight against this Egyptian plague of flies in the shape of bro-kers and bankers. Moreover, there are six thousand barbers to "shave" the six thousand sand merchants, sixty four thousand masons, and nearly two hundred thousand carpenters We have fourteen thousand bakers to make our bread, twenty four thousand lawyers to set us by the ears, forty thousand doctors to "kill or cure," and fifteen hundred editors to keep this motley mass in order—by the potent powselves down as servants, though most of us serve others in some capacity or other, from the boot-black who polishes our shoes, to the booksellers who brightens the public intellect. No-body, according to the census, follows the trade of a politician, though there are enough, hear ven knows, in this city alone, to have condemned a dozen Sodoms and Gomorrahs. The census fails to record, likewise, the existence of any patriots among us, though we have thought long ago that patriotism was especially a pro-fession, a profession and nothing else.

The forty thousand physicians support five hundred undertakers, which gives the impor-tant statistical fact that it takes eighty doctors to keep one undertaker in a brief business-[a downright slander.] We have fifteen hun-[a downright slander.] We have fifteen hundree wagon makers, three thousand watch makers, seventy eight vinegar makers, including we suppose, all the crowes, crusty bachelors, and verjuice old mato, thirty thousand wheelwrights, and thirty three bowmen. We have four thousand cutlers; twenty three thousand saddlers; and five thousand railroad men. We have one hundred and fifty four opticians and ten occulists, but nearly four thousand confectioneers, proving that we care infinitely more for eating than for eye-sight. This reminds us that there are five thousand brewers and seven hundred wine dealers, but the cenminds us that there are the thousand brewers and seven hundred wine dealers, but the census, strange to say, is silent as to the number who drink beer and "quaff-the rosy." In all, we have about five millions and a half, above the age of fifteen years, who are busily employed at some trade, profession or other occupation by which to earn a livelihood. It is the profession of always and the profession of always are considered. plain we are not a nation of sluggards. We nearly all do something. Nay, to be an idle

"Oh, My Poor Wife and Children!"-These were the last words ever uttered by poor Captain Follansbee, of the ill fated ship St. Dennis. The last that was seen of him by his survivors. he was winding up his watch-a melancholy illustration of the force of habit, for he mast have already realized that he had no further occasion to taks note of the lapse of time .-His thoughts were doubtless with his distresss ed family, for whom he was more anxieus than for himself, and whom he now was as powerless to assist as they to assist him. We trust, says the New York Post, his heart-piercing cry was not sent up in vain, but trust that it will reach the hearts of all who know how felt the agony of his last moments, and that of his brave companions, and who will be disposed to do all that can be done to take from that last agony its sting. The flags of the shipping are placed half-mast to-day, says the Journal of Commerce of the 18th, as a mark of respect for the memory of the lamented Captain Follansbee, and those who perished with him in the packet ship St. Dennis.

Chapped Hands .- From personal experience we know the following compound an effectual remedy for the affliction with which many suffer at this season:

"Scrape into an earthen vessel 14 ounces of spermaciti and half an ounce of white wax; add 6 drachms of powdered camphor, and 5 table-spoonfuls of the best olive oil. Let it stand when liquid. Before retiring, put the oint-ment on the hands—also before washing them. Use soap as usual."

TNo government can flourish where the morals and manners of the people are corrupted; for as Tully observes, take but away the aw eof religion, and fidelity and justice, so necessary to the keeping up human society, must perish with it.

A Peep into a Washington Heil.

Having heard much of the magnificence and randour of the metropolitan gambling houses, with several Clevelind friends, paid one a visit the other night. The entrance was through a parrow, lighted way, opening from the Avenue, just east of the National. A pair of stairs at the further end of the hall brings you abruptly against a small door, fastened on the inside; you ring a bell; a colored servant looks through a latticed panel, to see if all is right. If he discovers a well-known cu-tomer, or a frequent visitor of such places, the whole party is admitted, on the principle, of course, that "a person is known by the company he keeps," Gamblers understand human nature better than anybody else, and they know this old adage is as true in hell as it is out. We were admitted first into a room beautifully carpeted, frescoe painted, with chairs, softs, lounges, &c., of rosewood, a large centre-table, on which were the leading newspapers of the country, and around which sat several well-dressed gentlemen leisurely reading and discussing the news of the day. This was but the half of a double parlor—the reception room.

or, as Milton would say, "the vestibule of hell."
Our guide, who was a well-known Washington gentleman, introduced up to the keeper of the establishment, telling him that we had never been in such a place before, and was led by curiosity to explore his infernal domains. He appeared highly delighted, and immediately opened up to the "inner temple;" we intered, and found the half had not been told us—a chandelier, costing from three to four hundred dollars, brilliantly lighted up, flung its glitter-ing rays on gold papered walls, satin damask curtables, sofas, &c. In the centre, and near one end of the room, stood a long six-legged table, with a richly-embroidered spread, falling in folds nearly to the floor; on the wall over this table hung a massive gilt frame, and large as life a huge crouching tiger, with eyes of glaring fire, lips apart, and apparently ready for glaring upon his unsuspecting victim. The cloth being removed from the table beneath, revealed a Faro Bank, with all the implements of the well-known fascinating game-ivory chips, representing $1, $5, $25, $250 each, lay piled up in a corner, for the convenience of the betters; in a small box beneath lay piles of bank-bills and heaps of double-engles for the redemption of those ivory issues.

Not long after, an English tourist entered and enquired for relies, was told the chair sto-ry. The chair was bought at an incredible price. The next comer was informed that Wellington had taken a drink, and the "Wells ington tumbler" was accordingly sold. The third "arrival" gazed with breathless wonder at the nail on which Bonaparte "had hung up his hat." The fourth purchased the door posts between which he entered; and the fifth became the happy purchaser of the floor on which he had trodden. At the last advices, the fortunate tavern keeper had not a roof to cover his head and was sitting on a bag of gold in the centre of a deep pit formed by selling the dirt on which the house had stood.

The discovery of the open Circumpolar Sea appears to have been made by a Russian officer thirty years ago. This was Lieut Wrangel, who somewhere about the year 1824, advanced by sleds across the ice from the northern coast of Siberia, due north, to the open sea. Lieut. (now Admiral) Wrangel, took frequent soundings during the trip, and found of the most costly and splendid works ever the water shallow, with a mud bottom. The climate became more moderate as he made northing. According to his estimate of his position at the margin of the open polar ocean he must have been near the parallel of 82 degrees north, on which Dr. Kane was when he saw the same sea, almost on the opposite side of the Pole. Lieut. Wrangel concealed provisions in the ice as he advanced, which he cut out for supplies on his return. The party slept in lodges warmed by a spirit lamp; which also and licentiousness, cooked their meals. Their sufferings were not as great as those of the land parties that have gone out from the British exploring ships.

The French Soldier and Pope Pius.

The Courier des Alpes relates the following curious story, the authenticity of which it guarantees:

A few months ago, a soldier of the army of the East, writing to a conrade of the French army at Rome, drew a sad picture of the pri-vations and fatigues which the former had to endure, of the dangers to which they were exposed, and of the ravages which disease and the Russian balls were making in their ranks. He concluded his letter by recommending his friend without delay to carry to the Pope him-self the price of a mass for the preservation of the French army and request him to perform it. Faithful to the recommendation of his friend, the soldier at Rome went the next morning to the Vatican, and requested the first attendant he met to conduct him to his Holiness. "But, my brave fellow," said the guard, "have you obtained the previous authority for an audience?" "All that is very well," replied the soldier, "for great lords, but with a simple trooper no such ceremony is necessary." The guard would not trespass on the usual regulations, but the soldier, on his side, was so little disposed to give way, that it was found necessary to conduct him to the pre-late on duty that day. There, similar observa-tions were made to the applicant, but all in vain, and, at length, the prelate, despairing of overcoming the importunity of his visitor, went and mentioned the matter to the Pope.

As may be supposed, the curiosity of Pius IX. was excited by such an application, and the etiquence of the Vatican was set aside, the the eliquetes of the valican was set aside, the soldier being ushered into the presence of his Holiness. On coming near, the soldier stood upright as a post, and then giving the military salute by raising his hand to his forehead, addressed the Pope as follows, just as if he was speaking to the Lieutenant of his company:

"Mon pape, here is a letter from a comrade in the Crimes which concerns you always to read the Crimea, which concerns you; please to rend it, and tell me what answer I am to send." At the same time, he with one hand held out the letter, and with the other some pieces of money. The Pope took the letter, and after reading it, returned it to the soldier, saying: "My friend, my mass of to-morrow is appropriated to a particular purpose; but the day after, without fail, I will say one with pleasure for that grand French army. I, however, make one condition, and that is, that you attend yourself and prepare to receive the Holy Communion. As to the parament you offer, keep the money to drink to the health of your brave brothers in arms."
"That is sufficient, Mon Pape," replied the soldier, "I will go and prepare myself with the chaplain of the regiment, and the day after to-

Use of Salt in Cooking Vegetables .- Here is something everybody ought to have known long ago, and that every body should now read and remember:

If the portion of vegetables be boiled in pure distilled or rain water, and another in water to which a little salt has been added, a detered your shop during the battle, and sat cided difference is perceptible in the tenderness of the two. Vegetables boiled in pure water are vastly inferior. This inferiority may go so far, in the case of onions for instance, that they are almost entirely destitute of taste or odor.
