Thanksgiving Night's Dream.

Thursday Mr. Jones partook of a turkey dinner, and that night had a dream like this:
He dreamed that he was nicely dressed and stuffed with oysters, and lying upon a dish upon a dining table. Seated at the head of the table was a huge turkey, at the other was Mrs. Turkey, while on either side of the table sat their little ones, their mouths watering for a nice piece of baked Mr. Jones, upon whom their hungry eyes were riveted.
Mrs. Turkey, who was somewhat of a dabbler, and therefore ever ready to avail herself of an opportunity to give an oration, arose from his side and began to speak.
My dear wife and little turklings, do not partake of this nice fat Mr. Jones. I wish to say a few words, and it devolves upon me, as head of this family, the pleasant duty of impressing upon your minds some of the reasons why we should be thankful. I will first touch upon a subject which is to every man's heart most dear—namely, sex. In as much as the great men of this Empire have seen fit to set as their ruler that magnificent William Jennings McBryan, we should be grateful. Did I hear you say why? Because, fellow Turks, William Jennings McBryan is the head of our great ship of state, and will be carried along pleasant seas. He is a friend of the people, and will see to it that we live and prosper. How does that benefit us? Why in less than ten years our will be so high that we can afford to purchase an axe with which to sever our heads from our bodies. And thus we will owe it to the peerless McBryan when our necks are thus severed from our bodies.
The doctors have hardly yet learned what a valuable curative power there is in laughter. It is a precious and health-giving tonic, often more efficacious than bitters or iron and far pleasanter to take.
L. t the dyspeptic, the bilious, the melancholy and those who seem to be wasting away without any discoverable cause take a course of funny stories and humorous books; let them retire to their closets or to the woods and laugh out loud for a few minutes two or three times a day, and when they have done this a month or two let them tell their friends the secret of their improved health.—Youth's Companion.

Then Mr. Turkey took up the carving knife and the fork, and proceeded to job the latter instrument into the nice warm oyster stuffed breast of Mr. Jones. This was too much for the dreaming Jones, and he uttered a scream and woke up.

Laugh and Get Well.

"Laugh and grow fat" is a saying that contains a deal of truth and is worthy of attention by many sufferers in body as well as in mind. We instinctively associate jollity with rotundity and a sour disposition with a spare form. The rule is, of course, not without exception, for we often see people with little propensity to take on fat who are full of fun and sunshine. Such persons are not boisterous, however. They are possessed, it may be, of a quiet humor, are happy and make others happy, and they smile as easily and perhaps laugh softly; but they do not laugh loud.
The convulsive movements that we call laughter exert a very real effect upon the physical organism. They cause the arteries to dilate, so that they carry more blood to the tissues of the body, and the heart to beat more rapidly, so that the flow of blood through the vessels is hastened. In other words, laughter promotes the very best conditions for an increase of the vital processes—the tissues take up more nutritive material, and the waste products are more promptly removed.
Not only is laughter an accompaniment and an expression of joy, but it even creates joy. Often a good laugh, excited in spite of one's self, will change the current of thought and impart a general rosy tint to what was before the deepest blue.
The happy effect is due in part to the brain and the consequent better working of the instrument of thought, and partly to the fact that when a mental state and a physical act are associated (the physical state being usually induced by the mental act) the performance of the physical act, even if at first perfunctory, will in time induce the mental state corresponding to it.
The doctors have hardly yet learned what a valuable curative power there is in laughter. It is a precious and health-giving tonic, often more efficacious than bitters or iron and far pleasanter to take.
L. t the dyspeptic, the bilious, the melancholy and those who seem to be wasting away without any discoverable cause take a course of funny stories and humorous books; let them retire to their closets or to the woods and laugh out loud for a few minutes two or three times a day, and when they have done this a month or two let them tell their friends the secret of their improved health.—Youth's Companion.

He Made a Mistake.

One day a farmer and his wife came to our town to make some purchases. After they had bought extensively at the store of one of our prominent merchants who was a liberal patron of printer's ink, they started out to visit some friends. Just as they passed another store the proprietor stepped out and shook hands with them and invited them into his store. "By the way, Mr. —, did you see my big sign on the fence about two miles out on your road?" said the merchant. "No," replied the farmer, "I take the Thibodaux Sentinel, and when I look for bargains I turn to its advertising columns and find where to go. I'm a busy man and don't have time to stop and read signs on the fences and guide posts."

The trusts are rapidly raising the price of every article that they handle; and in view of these advanced prices the New York World says it is doubtful if the people can make a living as easily in the prevailing "prosperity" as they did before it struck us.

The Local Merchants.

An advertisement in a live local paper always pays good interest on the money invested. Most merchants expect to get a return of several hundred dollars from a twenty five dollar ad and feel disappointed when this extravagant expectation is not fulfilled. Money judiciously spent for advertising will bring in larger returns than when invested in other ways, but the newspapers of the country cannot perform impossibilities. They can, however, and do give good results to all those who make a liberal use of printers ink in recommending their wares to the public. In every community the most successful merchants are those who make use of the columns of the local papers.—Seneca Falls (N. Y.) Journal.

"Entertainers" Euchre.

The Entertainers Club met on Tuesday night at the home of Mrs. Frost on Jackson St, where they spent several pleasant hours playing Euchre. Those present were—Mesdames L. E. Meyer, E. G. Robichaux, P. L. Braud, C. P. Shaver, L. C. Waterbury, Mad dux; Misses Laura Lagarde, Bertha and Lucy Foret, Vivian Knobloch, Bertha Riviere, Alice Malhot, Zenobia, Rosa, May, and Elmira Frost; Messrs C. A. Badaux, P. L. Braud, P. P. Delaune, L. C. Waterbury, C. P. Shaver, E. G. Robichaux, R. Percy, L. H. Lancaster, W. Lafargue, F. Harmon and Doctors H. S. Smith and L. E. Meyer.

The ladies first prize, a letter set, was won by Miss Lucy Foret, consolation prize, ballet dancer, won by Miss Bertha Riviere, booby, a deceptive drinking glass, won by Miss Elmira Frost. Gentlemen's first prize, wall pocket for paper, won by P. L. Braud; consolation prize, silver book mark, won by Chas. A. Badaux, booby, a jumping jack, won by P. P. Delaune.

Disease and danger lurk in the vital organs. The blood becomes vitiated and the general health is undermined whenever the stomach and liver fail to perform their functions as nature intended. HERBINE will tone up the stomach, regulate the liver, where other preparations only relieve. Price, 50 cents. For sale by Thibodaux drug store.

It has been agreed that newspaper subscriptions are an infallible test of a man's honesty. They will sooner or later discover the man. If he is dishonest he will cheat the printer some way—declare he has paid when he has not—sent money in the mails which was lost—will take the paper and not pay for it on the ground that he never subscribed for it—or move away and leave it coming to the man left—when the postmaster will inform the publisher to his sorrow, that "the paper addressed to — is not taken out," etc, and so he is done up in all kinds of rascally ways. There is no telling how many different ways is conjured up to beat the unwary publisher. Thousands of alleged christians are dishonest in this particular, at least, and the printers' book will tell fearful tales at the final judgment.—E. E.

A Wonderful Offer to Women.
We have received word of a most remarkable offer which is to be made to women by The Delinctor, of New York.
Taking the fact that next year begins a new century, The Delinctor offers to distribute $17,500 among 1901 women. The plan is so cleverly arranged that a woman living in a small town or village, has just as good a chance to win one of these 1901 prizes as a woman living in a city—because the prizes are given for the number of subscriptions secured in a town in proportion to the population of that town, instead of being given simply to those who send the largest list of subscribers—which, of course, are most easily obtained in big cities. Another clever feature of the plan is that all the cities and towns of the United States and Canada have been arranged in seven classes. The cities of the greatest population are grouped in Class 1, and as these cities are not very many, the prizes offered are twenty-eight; the highest prize being $500, and the lowest $50. The total amount of prizes given away in this class is $1,500. The remaining smaller towns and villages fall into six other classes, and as the number of towns in a class increases, because, of course, there are more small towns than large ones, the amount of prizes given away to a class increases, so that in Class 7, there will be $4,000 distributed among 601 winners.
Furthermore, to everyone who fails to win one of the 1901 prizes there will be paid an extra commission on subscriptions, provided they equal one out of every two hundred inhabitants of the town from which the contributor sends them.
This is altogether a very liberal offer, and one which the famous old Delinctor is well able to make good. From our point of view, we do not see why such an offer needs to be made by the Publishers of The Delinctor, for we believe it already has nearly half a million subscribers. Its strong hold upon the affections of American women has come in the past generation, from its practical advice about dress details and home matters.
