ROOMS DEMOCRATIC CONSERVATIVE PARTY Central Executive Committee, Baton Rouge, Sept. 9, 1880. The members of the Committee are hereby notified to attend a meeting at their Rooms in the city of Baton Rouge, on Saturday, the 10th day of September, 1880.

Hancock may be "only a soldier," but he has always kept in view the fact that the people have rights which ought to be respected.

Do you boss a loom? Well, the Weavers suffered a defeat of 60,000 in Arkansas last Monday. The Fishback amendment is probably defeated.

The last issue of the Ouachita Telegraph brought it into "sweet sixteen," and the same indefatigable spirit that started it still continues the enterprise.

From the New Orleans Picayune we learn that the efforts of Mr. Nathan in filling the orders received from Louisiana sugar planters for white labor from southern Europe have been very successful.

Sambo settles the political question: "De Lawd made each one for a special purpose, an' de chap who was created to use a plow will git busted ebry time he believes dat he was cut out fur a statesman."

The Republicans call the Presidential steal a dead issue. With one of the eight thieves running for President, the people have a glorious chance to show the Republicans their mistake, and they will do it.

A Paterson manufacturer took his 200 employees on an excursion to Long Branch recently, all under full wages. He admits that his older brothers in the trade think this a foolish business, but he finds some consolation in the fact that his hands have never struck.

The Cincinnati Commercial says the South wants the whole country turned over to it experiment on. The South doesn't want to be experimented on as it was after the war by the concern called the Southern Republican party, and it doesn't intend to be. That is all.

As an evidence of the benefit of railroads we will state that the first day after trains commenced to run from New Orleans to Houston, two hundred and fifty bales of cotton arrived in Houston for shipment to New Orleans. That was pretty good for one item.

The plundering of the wrecked steamer Vera Cruz on the coast of Florida by a portion of the citizens of that state and the pilots of St. Augustine should be a lesson to Congress to provide by strict laws against the recurrence of such disgraceful affairs in the future.

Southern Live Stock Journal: The cross of a Polled Angus bull and a good native cow, makes an animal that is superior for beef. Some of this beef is now finding its way from Texas into the Kansas City and St. Louis markets, and the butchers of these cities are highly pleased with it. It is finely marbled, juicy and tender. In Great Britain, the beef of the Angus is unrivaled by that of any other breed. These cattle are extremely hardy, and could hardly fail to suit the wants of the generality of our Southern farmers, since rich and luxurious pastures are not necessary.

MISSED THE PENITENTIARY BY ONE VOTE.

The man Lanier, who, in concluding a villainous article against us in his North Louisiana Republican, announced his intention to bring forth in the next number of his paper, "his vindication signed by the best citizens of East Carroll" having failed to carry out his boast, we have concluded to end our expose of his character by stating the fact that during our late visit to New Orleans the Deputy Clerk of the Criminal Court, from information taken from the record of the old Superior Criminal Court, showed that B. H. Lanier after several postponements of the investigation of the charge of embezzling, as Tax Collector the moneys of the State, was tried in 1878, the jury failing to agree, there being, so it was currently reported around the Court, ELEVEN JURORS FOR CONVICTION against ONE for acquittal. When the Superior Criminal Court was abolished under the operation of the new Constitution, in consideration of the heavy cost which had attended the attempts to bring Lanier to trial in years past, for the reason that witnesses had to be brought to New Orleans from the parish of East Carroll, the District Attorney allowed Lanier to go untried by justice by entering a nolle prosequi. Thus did he escape the penitentiary.

Such is the man, whom the Hayes administration has appointed a Deputy Collector of Internal Revenue, in acknowledgement for the slanders he brings forth in his paper against the Democratic party and the Southern people generally.

Our task has now ended, and he stands exposed in his true light before the press and the people that he has robbed and outraged.

We care no more for his curses than we do the howlings of the prairie dog. We shall notice him no longer.

AROUND THE CRESCENT CITY.

On Wednesday evening last we took our departure on the steamer Gay for New Orleans. Besides the goodly number of cotton bales already on board, Baton Rouge added fully one hundred bales more to the cargo. A cool nother was blowing rendering the atmosphere somewhat "wintry." Our summer "get-up" we soon found rather thin and as an offset we came to the conclusion that we would establish our headquarters within the cabin. When bed time came, a survey of the situation caused us to adopt the plan of concentrating all the bed cover that we could gather. So we stripped the top berth and in that way managed to make out for the night in the lower one.

We reached the city before breakfast time on Thursday and repaired to the Cosmopolitan Restaurant on Royal street, where Mr. Chaplain met us with his usual greeting: "Won't you have a toady?" Of course, we excused ourself; we hardly ever indulged so early in the morning, etc. After a breakfast such as that favorite establishment furnishes them, we felt in trim to see all that was to be seen around the city.

Already the streets resound with the hum of traffic; the fleecy staple is daily arriving in increasing supply and strangers are coming in from every direction. The awakening of the great Metropolis after its slumber during the heated term just passed has arrived and ere long Canal street will be in full blast. The merchants are anticipating the best business season since the war and the near future is radiant with hope. New Orleans will be gayier this year than ever before; the old Opera House will be rendered brilliant by a galaxy of artists who have been engaged without regard to expenses. All the other theatres have made preparations in accordance with the example set by the lovers of the opera; thus will the drama and comedy too be rendered by its most talented delineators.

In a word, New Orleans will be this winter, the most enchanting city in America.

In the evening we rode out to West End, in company with our townsmen, the Messrs. B. Though the weather was cloudy and decidedly cool, we found there a considerable number of sight seers.

West End, on the lake shore, is becoming a formidable rival of the Spanish Fort. A splendid hotel, with elegant towers and mansard roofs has been erected, besides other buildings wherein refreshments are sold, by attentive waiters. Along the revetment levee a beautiful walk and drive have been arranged, affording comfortable seats in full range of the breezes of Pontchartrain. There are "parterres," and artificial grottoes and mounds constructed of rude rock, all of which are more than pleasing to the eye. Darkness changed into dazzling light by the rays of the electric light, which gives to the scene a truly enchanting appearance. In addition, a full band of artists fill one's soul with delight by the accents of the choicest musical morceaux which they discourse. In spite of the fact that we are from the country, so charmed were we that we could not refrain from keeping time with the musicians, by tambourining with our heels on the floor over which we stood, whilst viewing the beautiful women, everywhere around us. It's no use talking, but the man who can stand there impassioned amid the glare of the electric light, the sweet music, the lake breeze, the women of the Crescent City and.....the beer, is.....well.....we have our opinion of him. That's all.

On the following evening we called on Gov. Wiltz, whom we found entirely recuperated in health. He received us with that courtesy for which he is noted. He alluded during the conversation to the matter of the Extra Session and announced himself as entirely opposed to such a measure. The Governor admitted that he had not been laying in a bed of roses since his inauguration. He had been compelled to go through the most disagreeable portion of his duties: that of the distribution of the leaves and fishes. He had in consequence caught the devil from right to left. From this out, however, the task though an arduous one, would be more pleasant. He intended to direct his energies towards the development of the material interests of both country and city. "There are railways to be built, factories to be established and emigration is to be drawn to our State," said he. "You can depend, that I will use all the influence in my power to further these ends." He further expressed his desire that the work on the Capitol should be pressed as rapidly as possible in order that in obedience to the wishes of the people as expressed by the Constitution the removal of the Government to Baton Rouge might not be delayed. He hoped that railway connection between New Orleans and Baton Rouge should be had as soon as possible. He would endeavor to be in our city on the 4th of October to attend the meeting of the University Board and pay a visit to the new Capitol now in rapid process of reconstruction.

We were altogether pleased with his expressions and his evident determination to make himself useful to the people who have honored him by electing him to the highest position in the State. The citizens of New Orleans, rejoice in the fact that yellow fever has given them the go-by and no sickness of any alarming character has appeared, as the list of mortality, an unusually light one, will show. Two weeks more will bring cool weather, and the business and pleasure boom will render our neighbors happier than for twenty-five years past.
