

ANOTHER KNOW-NOTHING MOVEMENT.

The New Orleans States contains a manifesto from a lot of unselfish patriots who don't want to admit naturalized citizens to the distribution of official chicken pie.

These hungry boys, instead of waiting till the offices seek them, are coming forward to seek the offices. A horse to be a horse must be born in the stable, is the dead principle which these liberal-minded and progressive men have started out to revive.

The people of the United States are not apt to forget that in one century their population has increased from about three millions to over fifty millions; a fact which shows that the great mass is composed of citizens of foreign birth, or their sons.

While there are, at this late day even, narrow-minded men to be found here and there, who would be willing to ostracize the hardy immigrant, whose presence is so much needed to make a garden spot of our States, the immense and intelligent majority will laugh at the dashing fellows who would inaugurate a crusade to monopolize the "flesh pots of Egypt."

Thousands of ocean steamers, today, patrol the ocean, bringing weekly intercourse the nations of the civilized world, while the telegraph conveys the news, in a few minutes, from Hemisphere to Hemisphere. Railroads link one State to another, so that our great cosmopolitan nation is welding itself into the greatest power that the earth has ever borne on its bosom.

America illustrates grandly, the noble theory that the human race is one common brotherhood. Here the Frenchman, the German, the Scandinavian, the Briton, even the dusky African, live side by side in peace, burying in our fertile soil the deadly fends which the dark centuries had transmitted from generation to generation, among the peoples of the old Continent. The native tongues that threw into confusion the workmen at the tower of Babel, are here agglomerated and superceded in time, by the national English language.

The voice of God speaks through the majority of a people, each member of whom is a free man.

What these men, of whom we speak ask, is simply to face to the rear and arrest that current, which the grand conceptions of man and the march of progress and civilization have rendered absolutely irresistible.

We are in favor, though, of "giving the boys a chance," so that the know-nothings of the year 1881, may inscribe their names on the tablets of history, as "pull-backs" of the first water.

Red warriors, are you, and where are you?

Crecentius, a correspondent in the the last number of the Sugar Planter, enters into a long dissertation regarding the sacred and constitutional rights of individuals whose property cannot be ruthlessly invaded by railroad companies, etc. All this is very well as far as it goes. Yet Crecentius ought to remember that if individuals have rights, the public have some too. While individuals have the right to obtain just compensation for their property, when it is required for the convenience of the public, these same individuals have not the right to oppose the laying of roads and railways upon the same allegation that they are not going to be damaged thereby. Damages are recovered only when they have been committed, not before. If Crecentius' theory was correct, there couldn't be found a common road, much less a railroad in the country; because there are individuals everywhere, who complain that they will be ruined, for several reasons, by the laying of highways through their property. Towns and cities would be hemmed in by the fences of obstreperous and unreasonable land owners.

The right that the public has to travel from one point to another is one which the constitutions of the land has always maintained, and Crecentius will find it out before he grows much older.

We estimate the total loss at $2,500. The principal losers are Mrs. V. Gouzar, Mrs. A. Buniff, Messrs. A. A. Ozenne, E. Angelloz, L. Nini, Henry Husband and Paul Lyons.

THE OHIO EARTHQUAKE.

Details of its Terrible Ravages.

LONDON, April 9.—The Times correspondent at Chio, under date of the 7th inst., telegraphs as follows: I have just arrived here from Constantinople, and find a picture of desolation such as is rarely witnessed. The town looks as if it had been terribly bombarded. Hundreds of houses are transformed into a shapelass mass of ruins, under which lie buried an unknown number of victims.

The majority of the remaining houses are already cracked and roofless, and may fall at any moment. Nearly every building in the town has suffered more or less. The inhabitants wander about anxious to search for missing relatives and lost property but are afraid to risk their lives in the perilous work of clearing away the rubbish. Many who are willing to expose themselves to danger are prevented by friends or the police.

Fear, grief and despair are depicted on every face. All have some sad or tragic tale to tell. The first shock was felt on Sunday afternoon at about half-past one o'clock. Immediately the houses began to fall, wild shrieks were heard on every side, and then followed an awful silence of some minutes. Terrified survivors gradually ventured into a narrow lane and reached open spaces.

Shortly afterward another terrible shock completed the devastation, when it remained quiet until sunset when it again began to shake the island throughout as severely as before. All night long shocks succeeded each other at short intervals, and each one was preceded by dull soups like subterranean explosions. Since that frequent shocks have been felt. A few minutes ago, while writing the present dispatch, I distinctly heard an explosion like the sound and felt the earth tremble, but as I am under canvas I have nothing to fear. The old Geonese fortress, containing 400 houses, inhabited by Musselmen and Jews, suffered more than the rest of the town. Ground there sunk about half a metre, and nearly all the houses were immediately destroyed and several hundred persons must have perished.

About thirty Mussulmans, armed, were assembled in one of the houses, not one whom escaped. The southern part of the island is said to have suffered more than this town. Her Majesty's gun vessel Bitters arrived here this morning.

The captain at once came ashore, and after consulting with the governor of the island, organized relief parties for tending to the wounded and extricating bodies from the ruins. He then went to Chesm and made careful inquiries regarding the state of the town and its inhabitants. To-morrow he intends visiting the southern part of the island, whereless has been done for the sufferers.

I visited the chasm this afternoon; only about ten inhabitants were killed but many houses are in ruins and very many more are dilapidated. The mayor assured me that three-quarters of the houses are in a dangerous condition. The inhabitants are afraid to live even in those which are uninjured for ever since last Sunday frequent shocks have been felt.

Nearly all prefer to camp out as the weather is fine; the hardship in this respect is not great. It is said that throughout the district not less than 35,000 people are without shelter. In Kostro the work of extracting bodies and attending the wounded is progressing satisfactorily, but the stifling odor in the vicinity of many of the ruins shows that the former operation is far from complete.

On the other hand some wonderful escapes have occurred. One woman was buried under the ruins for fifty-two hours and at last was rescued, having given birth in the meantime to a child. The child is dead, but the woman is doing well.

A medical commission is sitting to consider the expedience of covering rubbish in the fortress with earth, as there is no hope of saving any lives and disinterment of the dead might produce an epidemic.

It is now believed, throughout the whole Island which contained 60,000 inhabitants, that 6000 or 7000 were killed, and twenty-five per cent. of the survivors wounded, French, British, United States and Austrian gun vessels in harbor are doing all in their power to assist the authorities in the work of relief. Only ten of the inhabitants of Chesm were killed, but many houses are in ruins and 30,000 people are without shelter.

Pursuant to announcement the Army of Northern Virginia Benevolent Association, Louisiana Division, held their monthly meeting last evening at their hall, 59 St. Charles street, President John B. Richardson in the chair. The meeting was large and quite enthusiastic on the subject of the dedication of their tomb and monument, on the tenth of May next. The report of the committee in regard to the progress of the work was quite favorable, and indicated that everything would be ready in time. But a marked feature of the report was the very satisfactory evidence that, though the committee was working solely on the resources of the association and without seeking aid from outsiders, that since the objects of the undertaking have become known the warm hearts of our people have been found to vibrate in strong sympathy and earnestness with regard to the object of these gallant old veterans in their endeavors to commemorate the memory of their fallen heroes and their immortal "Stonewall." Indeed, feeling has been aroused so much on the subject that a number of the fairest daughters of the Crescent City have taken hold of the matter and will push through a cause to success which the women of the South so tenderly love. In fact, the members of the committee are sanguine that the tomb and monument will be completed without involving the association in debt—that, with the aid of the novel and unique entertainment in the ladies propose giving at the Opera-house. The different Confederate associations in the various parts of the South are invited, and the occasion will be honored by the presence of Mrs. Stonewall Jackson and her daughter, but the dedication will be a purely civic one—notwithstanding which our city will no doubt be crowded with warm Southern hearts from Maryland to Texas.

Among the features of the evening was the attention that was called and the manner with which the announcement was received that the day was the ninth of April, the eventful anniversary of the surrender at Appomattox. Towards the close of the meeting a letter was read from Mrs. Ring, presenting the association with several relics of a war, among which was a piece of a Confederate battle-flag of the Sixth Louisiana all tattered and torn, which had passed through sixteen battles, and had been preserved by the late Capt. George E. Ring up to the time of his death. The relics were received with great feeling, and an unanimous vote of thanks was passed, which is to be presented in due form to the wife of that brave and gallant soldier.—New Orleans Democrat.
