NEWS SUMMARY.

PERSONAL AND POLITICAL. J. Warren Woodward, Justice of the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania, is dead.

KEYTESVILLE, MO. UNDERTAKER AND DEALER IN FURNITURE. Keeps constantly on hand all sizes and styles of Metallic Burial Cases, Walnut Coffins. CHEAP FOR CASH. At the Cathedral in Los Angeles.

At this Cathedral, writes a correspondent of the Philadelphia Bulletin, on Palm Sunday for instance, the natives are awaiting their best. There are handsome young Senoritas in Americanized costume, coquetish and all. There are homely older members of the sex, whose forms have lost the grace of youth and become too substantial for the requirements of beauty, and whose faces are wrinkled as if with age, although in a colder climate they would yet be young.

There are some handsome, dashing young fellows, and men with most villainous faces, wearing broad "sombros" and clanking spurs; around the Plaza their horses (beasts of all conditions) are awaiting their masters. Wagons drawn by ill-matched teams are constantly arriving and depositing the delegation from the "Ranche."

The older woman, who has not yet become Americanized, still persists in encompassing the lower portion of their faces in a shawl, regardless of the condition of the weather. All are talking a language which is called Spanish for courtesy, but which is not of Castilian purity by any means, and the whole atmosphere is redolent with the perfume of garlic, a fondness for which is characteristic of the race, as is also their weakness for red peppers, or "chili," which enters so universally into the composition of all their dishes. In the back yards of the Spanish quarters, alternate strings of peppers and slices of beef can be seen hanging out to dry. It requires a philosopher to account for the liking which the natives of hot climates exhibit for peppers when the thermometer is aspiring toward the infinite; and we who call ourselves civilized have no idea of luxury except that which is afforded by something of an icy temperature.

DANIEL STANBERRY, a prominent farmer, residing near Keokuk, Iowa, was recently gored to death by a mad bull. The animal had to be shot before the body of Stanberry could be recovered, and it was then shockingly mutilated. The deceased leaves a wife and 14 children.

The shot was fired through the delivery-window of the office. The United States Commissioner has ordered the arrest of the culprit. A Vienna correspondent of the London Times reports that, in consequence of the bad harvest and numerous frosts, the distress in parts of Hungary threatens to become appalling during the coming winter. The Banat District is threatened with famine, and some of the inhabitants are prepared to emigrate to Serbia.

The business center of the village of Carroll, in Carroll County, Iowa, was destroyed by fire on the morning of the 25th. The Masonic and Odd Fellows' Halls, Presbyterian church, and over forty business houses were burned out. Loss from $150,000 to $200,000; insurance not over $35,000.

Sir Garnet Wolesey telegraphs that all important Zulu chiefs have now submitted to the British authorities. At Buffalo, N. Y., on the 23d, Charles F. Schuyler, a telegraph operator by profession, succeeded in kidnapping a young lady, the daughter of P. Townsend Davis, a prominent and wealthy citizen, for the purpose of compelling her father to pay a large sum for her ransom. Miss Davis was lured away from school by the villain, upon the representation that her father had been injured by an accident, and that he was in his employment and had been sent for him. The unsuspecting girl accompanied him to a room in a public building, where she said her father had been taken, and immediately upon her entering he locked the door and demanded that she copy a letter he had already prepared, pleading with her father to give the bearer $500, as the only means to secure her release. The girl finally prevailed upon him to let her go, upon her taking an oath not to disclose what had happened, and to immediately secure the money herself and bring it to him. Upon reaching home she at once told her parents her strange story; detectives were put upon the villain's track and he was soon captured. In his possession were found numerous letters addressed to prominent citizens, of a like character to that which Miss Davis was required to copy, from which it was evident that he had resolved upon the abduction of the children of wealthy parents as a scheme by which to make money easily and rapidly.

An Odessa paper publishes a letter from Kief, describing the terrible fire which occurred in that city on the 3d of September. While a furious storm was raging, the offices of the Fire Brigade and Chief of Police, a gunpowder magazine and four petroleum stores were simultaneously set on fire. The whole city was wrapped in a thick, black cloud of smoke, and every now and then people were terrified by a series of detonations and loud explosions. The entire garrison and firemen of the suburbs, and many inhabitants, labored indefatigably to extinguish the fire, but, despite their efforts, it continued until the morning of the second day after it broke out.

A telegram from Havana states that three slaveholders have emancipated their 6,000 slaves and contracted with them for their services for five years. The other slaveholders intend following their example. It is also stated that several Deputies are resolved to move the Spanish Cortes or Parliament for the immediate abolition of slavery in Cuba, without indemnity to the slaveowner.

Zululani is to be divided into many distinct sovereignties. A number of the Chiefs who are to receive territories belong to tribes who had been subjugated by the Zulus.

The City of Deadwood, Dakota, was almost literally wiped out by fire on the 29th. The fire originated in a bakery soon after midnight. It gained fearful headway in a few moments, and before the people could be aroused the city's doom was sealed. A high wind was blowing at the time, the water supply was short, and the fire apparatus poor and insufficient, in addition to which the buildings were mostly of wood and poorly constructed, and burned like so much chaff. About 125 business buildings, besides fifty or sixty dwelling-houses, were destroyed, and while it is impossible to give any definite figures regarding the loss, well posted business men place it at from $1,500,000 to $2,000,000. The insurance is very small, it being only recently that reliable companies had begun to take risks there. About 2,000 people are homeless and many destitute. Upon request of a committee of citizens, Gen. Sturgis, U. S. commander of the Meads, detailed a company of cavalry to act as guard over the burned city and protect such property as had been saved from the conflagration.

The War Department has received official advices from the fight of the 18th ult. at the head of the Las Animas River, in New Mexico, in which Victoria and his band of rebellious Indians successfully repelled the troops sent against them, with a loss of five men killed and one wounded and 30 horses killed and six wounded. Victoria's band is said to number about 140. Cavalry reinforcements have been sent forward, and hot work is expected.

The advances of the British force continue. The Amerer accompanies the troops. Sir Frederick Roberts has received instructions to issue a manifesto to the Afghan people that the British army advances on Cabul to avenge the treachery to the British army; that peaceable inhabitants will not be molested, but if opposition is offered those persons with arms in their hands will be treated as enemies. Non-combatants, women and children are advised to withdraw to a place of safety.

CRIMES AND CASUALTIES. Rev. Dexter L. Lounsbury, rector of the Episcopal Church at Stratford, near Bridgeport, Conn., was, on the morning of the 24th, shot and instantly killed by his wife while sleeping in bed. Mrs. Lounsbury had for some years been afflicted with a nervous disorder, but insanity had not heretofore been suspected. Recently she became quite excited regarding an attempted burglary of her house, and asked her husband to procure her a revolver, which he refused to do. She was determined to have a pistol, however, and went herself to New Haven and bought one—a small single-barreled affair, with which the killing was done. This it seems she had concealed under her pillow, probably against her husband's knowledge. Immediately after the shooting she ran upstairs crying, "I've killed my husband!" and awoke the servants, who found dead, shot
