A Scientist's Verdict.

A noted sociological investigator has published the result of an inquiry into the drinking habits of Europe, and sums up as follows:

"We find that the two banner countries for freedom of commerce and industry—Switzerland and Holland—are also the most advanced in restricting the freedom of the alcoholic drink traffic, and that despotic Russia comes next.

"That the most educated nations—France and Germany—are more drunken than the most ignorant—Russia, England and Spain.

"That wealth proves to be a more prolific cause of drunkenness than poverty, the surplus earnings being too often expended in drink.

That wine and beer are not temperance drinks and that the two countries inhabited by the chief wine and beer drinkers, and in which the wines and beers are of the lightest character—viz: France and Belgium—are the most drunken; while Russia—almost wholly brandy drinking—is a relatively sober country."—The Constitution.

Persons who sympathize with the afflicted will rejoice with D. E. Carr of 1235 Harrison street, Kansas City. He is an old sufferer from inflammatory rheumatism, but has not heretofore been troubled in this climate. Last winter he went up into Wisconsin, and in consequence has had another attack. "It came upon me again very acute and severe," he said. "My joints swelled and became inflamed; sore to touch or almost to look at. Upon the urgent request of my mother-in-law I tried Chamberlain's Pain Balm to reduce the swelling and ease the pain, and to my agreeable surprise, it did both. I have used three fifty-cent bottles and believe it to be the finest thing for rheumatism, pains and swellings extant. For sale by W. C. Gaston.

Why Don't Mother Strike?

"My mother gets me up, builds the fire, gets my breakfast, and sends me off," said a bright youth.

"Then she gets my father up, and gets his breakfast, and sends him off. Then she gives the other children their breakfast, and sends them off to school; and then she and the baby have their breakfast.

"Are you well paid?" "I get two dollars a week, and father gets two dollars a day."

"How much does your mother get?"

"With a bewildered look the boy said: "Mother? Why she doesn't work for anybody."

"I thought you said she worked for all of you."

"Oh, yes! For us she does; but there's no money in it."—Ex.

The Great Crime.

In "Coin's Financial School," at page 112, speaking of the leaving of silver out of the coinage act, this may be found:

"It is commonly known as the crime of 1873. A crime, because it has confiscated millions of dollars worth of property. A crime, because it has made thousands of paupers. A crime, because it has made tens of thousands of tramps. A crime, because it has caused thousands of suicides. A crime, because it has brought tears to strong men's eyes, and hunger and pinching want to orphans and widows. A crime, because it is destroying the honest yeomanry of the land, the bulwark of the nation. A crime because it has brought this once great people to the verge of ruin where it is now in imminent danger of tottering to its fall."

A Clown of Finance.

When Dr. Johnson was asked by a lady acquaintance why in his dictionary he had defined leetock as the knee of a horse, he replied, "Ignorance, madam, sheer ignorance."

This is the only explanation that can be offered for the clownish notion of Congressman Coombs of New York about the deep stupidity of the American farmers on the money question, which he has set himself the task of removing. His repetition of the negro minstrel story concerning the two "intelligent Kentucky farmers" who thought free coinage meant a distribution among the people of the silver in the treasury, shows that he is far more ignorant of the farmers than the farmers are of the money question.

If instead of gobbling down with open mouthed wonder all the opera bouffe stories about granger ignorance which delight metropolitan theatrical audiences Congressman Coombs would get out of the thick atmosphere of self-estified dogmatism which envelopes New York as a cloud and would mingle with the farmers of Kentucky, Missouri, Illinois, or any other Western or Southern state, he would find to his astonishment that many of them could teach him the a b c of some public questions, among them possibly the money question.

The farmers of this country know a great deal more than the city clowns think they do. The mass of them spend their leisure time in reading or discussion. Within their limitations their knowledge is accurate and their thinking clear. As a rule they are well grounded in the sound principles of Democratic government which underlie all public questions.

An analysis of the idea of Congressman Coombs and other provincials who look with contempt on the knowledge of the farmers would probably discover that they think them ignorant simply because they differ in opinion from themselves. As a matter of fact the most amusing clowns of finance are often found in the cities.—K. C. Star.

What They Say.

Tipton Times.
A banker: "I never go into any discussion of the details of the silver question, but it ought not to take much intelligence for any one to understand that the demonetization of silver has practically doubled the debts of the country, and while I have the good fortune not to belong to that class, my sympathy is with the debtor class." He's a Missourian, one of the most intelligent men in the state, honored and respected, is not a politician, and but for his innate modesty, we would be glad to give his name.

Another: "The fact is evident that the people have stood about the last turn of the screw of oppression that they can stand. If farmers carrying mortgages can't make expenses they will soon give up the farms, and then what is the money lender going to do? If all the farms I hold mortgages on were turned over to me, what would I do with them? They would be worthless to me unless somebody will rent and use them, and if matters get much worse, I am afraid there would be no demand for them. Something ought to be done to give the people relief."

OVERSTRAINED faculties can never bring out the best results. Overwork is always a waste of time, and, though it may not seem to be so at first, eventually the sad truth is always manifested. To cut off needed recreation, to curtail the hours of sleep, to postpone a vacation indefinitely, to refuse to take rest and ease and change under the impression that thus time is saved, is always a short-sighted policy and often a fatal mistake. The time arrives when the poor abused faculties take their revenge and refuse to serve altogether, or do it in so feeble a fashion as to show their deterioration.

TRUST.

There is no unbelief;
Whoever plants a seed beneath the sod
And waits to see it push away the clod,
He trusts in God.

Whoever says when clouds are in the sky,
"Be patient, heart, light breaketh by-and-by,"
Trusts the Most High.

Whoever sees 'neath winter's fields of snow
The silent harvest of the future grow,
God's power must know.

Whoever lies down on his couch to sleep
Content to lock each sense in slumber deep,
Knows God will keep.

Whoever says, "To-morrow,"
"The unknown,"
"The Future," trusts that Power alone
He dares disown.

The heart that looks on when eyelids close,
And dares to live when life has only woes,
God's comfort knows.

There is no unbelief;
And day by day, and night,
unconsciously
The heart lives by that faith the lips deny--
God knoweth why.

ALONE.

Since she went home--
Longer the evening shadows linger here,
The winter days fill so much of the year,
And even summer winds are chill and drear,
Since she went home.

Since she went home--
The robin's note has touched a minor strain.

The old glad songs breathe a sad refrain,
And laughter sobs with hidden, bitter pain,
Since she went home.

Since she went home--
How still the empty rooms her presence blessed;
Untouched the pillow that her dear head pressed;
My lonely heart hath nowhere for its rest,
Since she went home.

Since she went home--
The long, long days have crept away like years,
The sunlight has been dimmed with doubts and fears,
And the dark nights have rained in lonely tears,
Since she went home.

COMMON SENSE DISTANCED.

That we teach the children Danish,
Trigonometry and Spanish;
Fill their heads with old-time notions,
And the secrets of the oceans;
And the cuneiform inscriptions,
From the land of the Egyptians;
Learn the date of every battle;
Know the habits of the cattle;
Know the date of every crowning;
Read the poetry of Browning;
Make them show a preference
For each musty branch of science;
Tell the acreage of Sweden,
And the serpent's wiles at Eden;
And the other things we teach 'em
Make a mountain so immense
That we have not a moment left
To teach them common sense.
