At the festival Saturday night David Clavin was kicked by a horse and though severely shaken up was not much hurt.

"He Whom the Gods Would Destroy They First Make Mad."

Woe unto you, bond-holders, money changers, trusts and combines! The people will reckon with you in this good year of our Lord 1896.

Weep and howl for your time has come and your days of fraud and deception are well nigh ended! Beware of the month of November when your destruction will be sure and certain!

No longer can you deceive the people, although you combine together, widen you promises in many "whereases" and "resolves," pleading undying love and devotion to the interest of the farmer, laborer and wage-earner. Your day of doom will surely come; 'tis standing at your door!

The honest voter patiently, confidently awaits the hour when he may deposit his vote of repudiation and condemnation, now, henceforth and forever.

Gold! Gold, the most precious and scarcest of the money metals used by man, innocent when imbedded in the bowels of the earth; useful and beneficial when standing side by side with its more plentiful and less valuable elder brother, silver, each having a fixed value and performing the same offices for man, it has become, and is to-day, a necessity.

It is no argument against gold as a money metal because man has bowed down and worshiped at its shrine from the days of the golden calf until the present moment, nor should we rail against the rich man on account of his love of gold. Nor should we fail to appreciate the extraordinary advantages to wealth gold becomes in times of war and commotions, or even in a money panic. It is emphatically the rich man's money. Let him have it. We complain that our would-be masters have corruptly, wickedly and for their own enrichment and at the expense of the poor man divorced the two metals as money of final account, and now demand that the American people shall in November endorse the greatest crime of all the ages—the demotion of silver. They say to the gold-bug, "well done thou good and faithful servant." Thou hast been faithful in this thing now we will make thee ruler of this nation until such time as the gold-bugs of England and other nations permit us to restore silver to its constitutional right. Silver is the poor man's money and the poor man that fails to rally to its cause deserves to go hungry and naked. 16 TO 1. The hand that rocks the boat is the hand that is in a fair way to leave the world.
