The Naval High-Water Mark. An attempt to build a channel steamer to make forty knots an hour fell through after it was ascertained that nothing less than 50,000 horse power would give that speed. The very best that can be done and which will soon be done will be to build a ship with only 1,000 tons displacement, which will require 18,000 horse power to send it thirty knots an hour. The Parsons Atlantic liner is to have a speed of 26 knots, 18,000 tons displacement and 38,000 horse power. This marks, so to speak, the high-water mark in naval engineering.

Shade trees about the house are desirable, and elm and hard maple are among the best varieties for the purpose.

One advantage with clover is that it can be grown with a crop of small grain without special preparation of the soil and at small cost.

The calves will do much better at this time of the year if kept in the stable and fed a little milk and meal hay than to run in the pasture.

The women folks should not forget to gather herbs early, for they are richest in oil then. Dry in the shade and do not pulverize until needed for use.

Never let the hogs feel the effect of the dry time through late summer. Cut an armful of sweet corn each day for the sow and pigs, for when the pasture is dry they need it.

The ewes should not be allowed to become poor on the dry pasture at this season of the year, but should be kept in good flesh and fed extra if thin after weaning the lambs.

If the early chickens are to lay before cold weather sets in they should be well cared for at this season; give them plenty of food, plenty of room and good air. Sell off the old hens before they begin to molt.

If the horses do not look well nor eat well give them about six quarts of bran Saturday night instead of their regular grain ration. Do this every Saturday night and you will soon note the benefit.

Feed the young pigs, which are to be kept for breeders, oats and wheat middlings. These grains furnish material for the growth of a sound frame and muscular system, and favor the development of a strong constitution.

How is the water in the cow pasture? A cow that is required to drink water thick with mud will shrink in her milk and rapidly lose flesh. The purer and better the water, the better will be the health and condition of the cow.

If by the smart tactics of the old hen you have a brood of chickens that you had not expected don't coddle them; let them run. Throw the responsibility on the hen, and, 10 chances to one, they will make a thrifty, hardy flock.

A little bundle of hay put into an old potato crate and set where the calves can get at it will soon disappear. It will go to build up the bodies of your young stock. When very young the calf will begin to nibble hay. Keep some where it can reach it.

Sheep will gain much good grazing on the stubble fields. The sheep should be used as the weed destroyers on the farm, as they will eat nearly all weeds at some stage of their growth, usually while young and tender. There is no excuse for the prevalence of weeds where a thrifty man and a flock of sheep abide.

If you have a tall, strong field of corn, where the ears are high on the stalks and out of reach of sheep, the flock can be turned in to feed on and clean up any weeds or grass which may have come in since cultivation. They will also eat the low leaves on the corn-stalks. This will not injure the corn and will do the sheep good.

COL. CAMPBELL one of the attorneys for the prosecution in the trial of Caleb Powers for conspiracy to the murder of Governor Goebel, said on examination of the records during the four years' administration of Gov. Bradley, the only Republican governor Kentucky ever had, showed there were 895 murders, 285 convictions and 216 pardons for murder. No doubt it was the understanding of conspirators to murder Goebel and that in case they were apprehended, found guilty and sentenced to hang or to the penitentiary Gov. Taylor would pardon them out. This conclusion is reached because during 30 or 40 days in which Taylor was acting governor, he pardoned seven murderers.

A DISPATCH from Cleburne, Texas, says: "Some boys went into a watermelon patch and ate and destroyed many of the melons. Subsequently they wrote the farmer a letter telling him they would visit the patch again and would get more melons than on the previous visit. The farmer split the stems of some of the melons and inserted strychnine. Six boys visited the patch and ate the melons. As a result two of them died in the patch, two died on their way home, and two died after reaching home." Stealing watermelons and destroying the patch are low-down tricks; a species of vandalism condemned by all right-minded people, but impregnating the melons with a deadly poison is more reprehensible still.
