

THE THOROUGHBRED

Copyright 1907 by Hart Schaffner & Marx

GOOD clothes and a good horse are alike in one way; the thoroughbred quality is something more than a surface appearance; it's what's underneath that wins the race. That's what we like about the sound, reliable all-wool quality is in them; the tailoring is right; the "lines" of the garments are thoroughbred lines. They look "quality" all over.

Hart Schaffner & Marx Clothes;

The best of it is, for you, that that such clothes impart that look to the wearer.

Probate Pointers.

Allowances: Strub Bros., $37.47 against estate of Jesse Riley; H. L. Mann, $4 55 against estate of Jesse Riley.

The will of the late Wm. W. Riddell of Rothville is admitted to probate on the testimony of W. A. Wilkinson and Dr. C. D. Stratton as subscribing witnesses. A codicil to Mr. Riddell's will is also admitted to probate on the testimony of O. F. Litby and Dr. C. D. Stratton as subscribing witnesses. By the provisions of clause one of the will the decedent's wife is bequeathed all of the property owned by him in lot 10 in Rothville and also the sum of $2,000. Clause two provides for the payment of all of testator's just debts in due course of the administration of his estate and that all depositors in the Bank of Rothville, of which he was sole owner, be paid and their accounts with said bank be balanced without the formal presentation of their deposit claims. By the terms of clause three all of the remainder of the property is to be divided equally between his children, John P. Riddell, Cyrus H. Riddell, Claude A. Mauzey, Venelia Long, Wm. F. Riddell and Chas. A. Riddell in equal shares and to them and their heirs forever. His sons, John P. Riddell and Cyrus H. Riddell, are named as executors, and it is willed that they take charge of all the real estate and personal property of every character and description situated in Chariton county, Mo., or elsewhere, and as soon as practicable sell or dispose of the same at either public or private sale for the best obtainable price so far as is in their power, consistent, however, with the interests of those interested in the estate as distributees, etc. The will was made March 12, 1903. A codicil was added January 17, 1907, in which Mr. Riddell shows that he has paid his wife, Mary J. Riddell, the $2,000 mentioned in clause one of his will, and in addition he also bequeaths her all of the household and kitchen furniture and provisions now on hand as her absolute property. Further provision is made for Mrs. Riddell by leaving her $2,000 more in trust to her son, G. W. Mauzey. Having sold the Bank of Rothville since making his will, Mr. Riddell says in the codicil that the necessity of closing the accounts with depositors of the bank no longer exists, hence that clause of his will is revoked. The codicil further provides that Mr. Riddell's sons, John P. and Cyrus H. Riddell, and his friend, Chas. E. Allen, be and are appointed as executors, instead of only his two sons named, with the request to the court that they be permitted to serve without bond, to which request the court accedes. A provision is also made in the codicil that each of the executors shall receive $500 for his services in settling the estate. Mr. Riddell had given much of his property to his children, but it is estimated that the remainder of which he died seized will amount to about $150,000. W. A. Wilkinson and S. A. Richeson are the witnesses appointed by the court to make inventory of the estate,
