

"I Am Glad"

writes Mrs. Ethel Newlin, of Liberty Center, Ind., "that I began to take Cardui, for it has cured me, and I will never forget it. I cannot praise Cardui too highly for what it did for me. Before I began to take it, I was very bad color, suffered great pain and weighed only 105 pounds. Now I have a good color, do not suffer and weigh 125 lbs."

It is perfectly safe and harmless, for use by old and young, and may be taken, as a tonic, for months, without any possible harmful effect. Try it.

William Weakley, who for the past four years has held the office of circuit clerk of Macon county, is charged with the embezzlement of $300 from the school funds of that county. He pleaded not guilty Tuesday and was released on a $500 bond. It is likely experts will be put to work on the books to investigate how the records stands. The defendant's parents are high respected people. He is a young man and unmarried in 1906

History Concerning John Morrison Fuller.

The following history concerning John Morrison Fuller from Glasgow will be of interest:

John Fuller was born in Howard county. He was married to Miss Berenice Morrison under an agreement that they adopt each other's name. This agreement was legally confirmed and they became Mr. and Mrs. Morrison-Fuller. After spending years in Europe and Brookline, Mass., and summer resorts, they went to Glasgow ten years ago and occupied their old country home, later moving into town.

Shortly after coming here the projected Missouri Central Electric railway was surveyed, the line passing directly through Mrs. Fuller's farm. Mr. Fuller became angry at this proposed invasion of his farm, which had previously been bisected by the Chicago & Alton railway and crossed at one corner by the Wabash railway. George B. Harrison, cashier of the Glasgow Savings bank, was at that time president of the Missouri Central and Fuller quarreled with him over the matter, and finally began a fight on the road and its promoters. He tried to get local papers to publish his personal attacks on the promoters of the road and on their refusal to publish them he bought a plant and started a paper here. He not only bitterly attacked the officers of the railroad but he spent several hundred dollars investigating the past career of Colonel W. H. Chase, the original promoter of the road, and finally succeeded in forcing Chase out of the company.

During this fight on the railroad Fuller indulged in a number of freak things, designed to attract attention to his views on the railroad. As an example, he sent to St. Louis and had a circular platform ten feet in diameter constructed, around the outer edge of which a miniature railroad track was laid and on which was a motor and train of cars labeled, "Missouri Central Electric Railway." This he had conveyed to the street corner near the place of business of the president of the company, and seated on the curb stone he operated the railroad all day, explaining to the gathered crowd that this was the only opportunity they would ever have to see the Missouri Central railway in operation. Late in the evening, tiring of his fun, he gave the railroad away to a small boy.

A song burlesquing the president of the road was composed by him. This he had put on a phonograph record and with the largest phonograph he could buy, Fuller would put in this record and records of speeches he had prepared against the road and its promoters, and grind them out as often as he could get a crowd to listen to them. He sent to St. Louis for a cartoonist and kept him here several weeks making cartoons caricaturing the parties he was opposing and ridiculing the railroad project. Finally, when excitement had died down and there was no further agitation of the railroad project, Fuller lost interest in the newspaper and shut up shop.

Nearly three years ago, the local option issue was raised here and Fuller, who had started the Morrison-Fuller bank, espoused the cause of the wets and started a fight for personal liberty. He issued several numbers of an eight page paper devoted to the personal liberty idea as expressed by a man's privilege to get a drink when he wanted it. Again he employed a cartoonist and issued placards, bulletins and cartoons, attacking the dries.

After the local optionists had carried the election, Fuller gave a banquet to the wet supporters which cost him about $1,500 and later gave an equally expensive banquet to his colored followers.

There are thousands of so-called "just as good" Emulsions, but they are not—they are simply imitations which are never as good as the original. They are like thin milk—SCOTT'S is thick like a heavy cream.

If you want it thin, do it yourself—with water—but don't buy it thin.
