Whether it was a case of wet grounds at Huntsville or a sudden attack of cold feet, matters not. At any rate the ball game of last Sunday was called off after our boys had gone to the depot. It is charitable for Keytesville to charge the matter up to wet grounds although the eleventh hour recall is a strong symptom of chilblains.

The Fine Dark Bay Draft Stallion Honest Bob.

The fine dark bay draft stallion will make the season of 1911 at my farm, 4 miles northwest of Keytesville, at $10.00 to insure mare with foal. Honest Bob is 16 1-2 hands high and will weigh about 1,500 pounds; has good style and action and is a sure foal-getter. This is a high grade Percheron, and his colts rank very high, having brought $100 each at 6 months of age.

Don Pedro

A No. 1 black jack, with white points, splendid head and ears and large bone; will make the season at the same time and place. Don Pedro has proven a sure foal-getter and his colts are first-class. Terms $8.00 to insure mare with foal.

In all cases lien on mare until colt is foaled, and then colt is to stand good for the season. If mare is sold, traded or taken from the county, service becomes payable at once. Greatest care will be taken to prevent accidents, but I assume no liability should any occur.

Conservation.

While we're conserving coal and trees and waterfalls and things like these I trust that congress will observe some other things we might conserve—

Conserve the bliss of those that wed;
Conserve the hair upon my head;
Conserve the spinner's fading face;
Conserve the kitten's sprightly grace;

Conserve our stomachs, now the prey
Of some new diet fad each day;
Conserve our lasses and our lads
From these new education fads;

Conserve the faith in Santa Claus;
Conserve the reverence for laws;
Conserve the freshness of our youth,
Its faith in man, its love of truth;

Conserve the money spent on style,
The optimist's confiding smile,
The paragraph's stock of jokes,
The patience of a lot of folks!

And while this conservation it
Is on some statesmen might admit
The suitability of shelves
And prudently conserve-themself!

A Moving Sermon.

"I once had a parishioner who was a miser," said an English clergyman. "For this man's benefit I preached one Sunday a strong sermon on the necessity of charity, of philanthropy—a sermon on the duty and joy of giving. The miser, at whom I gazed often, seemed impressed. Next day I met him on the street. 'Well, John,' I said, 'what did you think of yesterday's sermon?' 'It moved me deeply, sir,' he answered. 'It brought home to me so strongly the necessity of giving alms that, honestly, sir, I've a great mind to turn beggar.'—Dallas Herald.

"Yes," replied Mrs. Naylor. "I wonder how she'd like the rest of us to be that curious about her. You know the doctor stopped at her house today too?"

"You don't say! I wonder what the matter there?"—Catholic Standard and Times.

A BARREL OF COMMON SALT

Surprising Effect It Had in Shaping a Man's Destiny.

"Did you ever think," said Golightly to his friend Quackenbos, "what a little thing will turn a man's destiny? I know a man whose present condition of wealth and head of a family, all he is, came from the overturning of a barrel of salt."

"I don't believe it, Golightly, but I am ready to hear about it."

"Let me see. You know the man, and I don't want to give you his name till after you have heard the story; then we'll see if you can guess who he is. For the present his name is Tomkins. When he was a youngster he studied medicine and on graduation settled in a suburban place where there were people of all degrees, from millionaires to washerwomen. At the end of the first month he had not had a patient, so he resolved to go somewhere else. The day before his intended departure a liveried servant hurried into his office and said that Miss Buckman's favorite saddle horse was dying and would he waive professional repugnance at doing a veterinary's work and go to see the animal.

"Tomkins needed money to square up before leaving, so he concluded to make a veterinary of himself for that once. When he reached the stable yard there stood a girl of twenty, pretty as a picture, evidently much distressed, watching a horse lying on his side.

"Oh, doctor," she said on learning of the groom who he was, "if you will only cure Bob I'll love you forever!"

"Of course she was so rattled she didn't know what she was saying, but somehow it came to the doctor that he would cure Bob and the girl would love him forever. It takes a young man, you know, to build castles out of air. He went up to the horse that was gasping for life, but before the doctor could get anything down the beast's throat he collapsed, and there he lay with his tongue hanging out, dead. At least if he wasn't dead there are no appearances by which a horse can be known to be dead.

"What could Tomkins do—a dead horse on one hand and a tearful girl on the other? He pretended to work on Bob by rubbing her, feeling there, pouring a mixture of bran and water down his throat—he had nothing else—but it was no use; the horse was dead as a doornail. Tomkins wouldn't own it to the young lady, but told her to go in the house and he would remain to observe and take advantage of the first sign of returning consciousness.

"Don't leave us, doctor," she pleaded. "Remain all night. Your room will be on the second story, back, where you can look down on the stable yard."

"Tomkins declared he would never leave Bob so long as there was any hope, and the young lady dragged her self away and into the house, looking back often to see if Bob had come to life. Tomkins remained by the horse till a servant came out and said that if the doctor felt that he could leave the invalid he was to come into dinner. Of course Tomkins could leave a dead horse, so he went in to dinner, but broke away after a hasty meal to avoid the storm of questions as to the horse's chances of getting well. He had promised to stay all night. Besides, the more time he spent the bigger bill he would make for services, so at 11 o'clock he told the hostler that if Bob showed signs of life to call him and went to bed. The hostler knew as well as Tomkins that Bob was dead, so he went to bed, too, leaving poor Bob's body where it lay in the stable yard. But before retiring he weighed the town seavenger to come the next morning to remove the corpse.

"Tomkins hadn't ever slept on such a downy bed before, so he didn't wake up the next morning till late. Then he took a bath, dressed and before going downstairs drew up the window shade to have a look at the corpse.

"No miracle ever astonished any one as the sight he saw astonished Tomkins. There was the whole family in the stable yard and Bob up on his four legs eating sugar out of Miss Buckman's hand.

"Oh, doctor!" cried Miss Buckman. "Can one ever repay you? When did the change come?"

"My dear young lady," said the doctor gravely, "at no time in my professional career have I been so pleased at saving a human patient as I am now at saving your horse."

"After looking Bob over and seeing that he was in excellent health the doctor whispered to the hostler:

"When did he get up?"

"Don't know, doctor," replied the man and ran to the gate to head off the scavenger who was coming to remove the corpse.

"Well, Tomkins got the secret of the horse's recovery from a stable boy. The boy had shortly before overturned a barrel of salt where the horse's head rested. The tongue, hanging out, had come in contact with the salt. Thus the horse, having been revived, licked it, and it proved to be what he needed. Tomkins married the grateful girl and I today a successful practitioner. Now, Quackenbos, guess who he is."

"You. Your story is well enough, but fate only required that you should meet the young lady for a mere case of mutual love. The overturned salt had nothing to do with it."

"Not at all. I maintain that all I am due to a barrel of salt."

MOBILE IS 200 YEARS OLD

Was First Capital of French Louisiana, and is Most Interesting City.

On February 26 many prelates of the Roman Catholic church, with Cardinal Gibbons presiding at the cathedral in Mobile, celebrated the two hundredth anniversary of the founding of that city by the French, under Bienville. There was a pontifical high mass and other exercises, and the civil authorities were represented in some of them. The reason why the Catholic church took the lead in the celebration is that church and state in France went hand in hand in planting new colonies in those days as well as in governing them, and also in governing old colonies.

Mobile is one of the most interesting of the country's cities. Founded several years before New Orleans, it was the first capital of French Louisiana and held this honor for a decade and a half. Among its natives and Canadian subjects France was well served on the American continent in the days of the grand monarch. La Salle, Iberville, Bienville and other empire builders were active and successful in planting the flag of the Bourbons over a large tract of the new world, including a great and rich part of the present United States.—Leslie's Magazine.

CITY OF ST. LOUIS IN 1819

Streets were Unpaved, Sidewalks a Rarity and Only Light in Streets Was Moon and Stars.

I confess I felt a little discouraged when I landed in St. Louis; it was not anything like as cleanly, or as well built as any of the towns of the west or south that I had previously visited.

The shore was nothing but ledges of limestone rocks, with here and there jagged projections of the same, standing like buttresses to keep off invaders; and at long intervals were to be seen a few steep warehouses, built in a very rough, though substantial manner. There was really but one street running parallel with the river that approximated to being closely built—the present Main street, which extended from about Vine street southwardly to somewhere near the termination of what is now Chestnut avenue; with short, narrow cross streets from the river, as Walnut, Elm, Myrtle, Almond, Poplar, etc.

There were a few dwelling houses scattered along on Second street; the streets were unpaved, except at great intervals; sidewalks were a rarity; and at night the only lights for the streets were what the moon and stars afforded. This was St. Louis in 1819. Missouri was yet a territory.—Lusk, Democratic Life.

Tried Bardell vs. Pickwick.

To the western district belonged in 1834 Wilda, Coleridge, Cromwell, Crowder and Gascon, the last named, raised to the bench in that year, being the model taken by Dickens for his Justice Starbuck, who tried the case of Bardell vs. Pickwick. Bardell was another, the son of the original of Sergeant Buzza in the same famous case.

There appeared not long ago in a daily paper, says the author of "Pie Powder," a statement that his Honor Judge James had recently presented a look at the original of Bardell to the Dickens Fellowship. The original was a young man which Mr. Bardell was employed not to forget had long stood on the landing of a west country hotel frequented by the bar men. It should be purchased to make the gift complete.—London Graphic.

A Reader Cures His Constipation—Try It Free

Simple way for any family to retain the good health of all its members

The editors of "Health Hints" and "Questions and Answers" have one question that is put to them more often than any other, and which strangely enough, they find the most difficult to answer. That is "How can I cure my constipation?"

Dr. Caldwell, an eminent specialist in diseases of the stomach, liver and bowels, has looked the whole field over, has practised the specialty for forty years and is convinced that the ingredients contained in what is called Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin has the best claim to attention from constipated people.

Its success in the cure of stubborn constipation has done much to displace the use of salts, waters, strong cathartics and such things. Syrup Pepsin, by training the stomach and bowel muscles to again do their work naturally, and with its tonic ingredients strengthening the nerves, brings about a lasting cure. Among its strongest supporters are Mr. John Graveline of 98 Milwaukee Ave., Detroit, Mich., and Mr. J. A. Vernon of Oklahoma City. Thousands of others of both sexes have written to Dr. Caldwell telling of gratifying results. It can be obtained of any druggist at fifty cents and one dollar a bottle, or if you want to try it first a sample bottle can be obtained by writing the doctor.

For the free sample address Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 402 Caldwell building, Monticello, Ill.
