Bright Messenger Gets on

Senator Nelson's Nerves

Senator Knute Nelson and a bright looking Western Union messenger were waiting for an elevator when the Norseman started conversation by asking the boy how much he was paid.

"I get only 75 cents a day and my duties are extremely arduous," said the boy, just like that.

"Yes, I suppose so," said Senator Nelson, "but 75 cents a day isn't so bad."

"But when you consider how assiduously we work the remunerating doesn't seem adequate," protested the boy.

"See here kid!" said Senator Nelson, "when I was your age I was plowing 12 hours a day for 25 cents and I didn't know my work was arduous, that I was working assiduously or that my remunerating was inadequate."
