

Eat the Sparrows

That English sparrows are good to eat is vouched for by a source as reliable as the agricultural department of the state of Missouri. A Maryville professor hearing this took a shotgun and with seven shots bagged 84 sparrows. He saved the breasts and had a sparrow pie. He says they were fine. While the sparrow is not eaten to any extent here he is in England where he is sold at the market and made into various highly edible dishes by the Englishmen who refuse to go back on the bird native to their realm.

Cries of "Fake"

Cries of "fake" are arising among the volatile Frenchmen who put down their hard-earned coin to see the Johnson-Moran affair. There is little inducement for men to hurt themselves badly when it is arranged before hand what each will win or lose. With the jackpot up to the winner it ought to be a better scrap. And, at that, there can be a frameup. It looks like the fight game had about gone the limit as a sport and is all in. The sport has been commercialized out of the prize-fight.

English militants have been burning churches and if the practice should reach this country, think what a risk a fellow would run who sleeps thru the sermons.

The Cleaning Up

After the celebration,—the morning after. There was a dark-brown look about the street after the celebration and Sunday saw a plentiful littering of paper, confetti and other remnants of the festivities of the day before. On Monday the white wing squad was abroad and soon had harvested the motley collection of joy evidence that lay strewn in the gutters. It was a successful celebration and the city acted promptly in cleaning up the debris.

Sordid

More sordidness shows up in the Mexican affair. What was formerly called by the newspapers the "Mexican Revolution" now is called the "Mexican Scandal." And, back of the scandal, is Big Money, the Standard Oil Co., J. D. Rockefeller and others. It is big money back of it and it is money that the people worship today. Therefore, with King Money back of the Mexican affair, how can there be any scandal?

HAS FINE APPLE CROP

S. J. Stowers Sprays and Ploughs—Crop Big as 1912 the Big Apple Year

There are some facts about spraying, the experience of one man at least in this vicinity, which will illustrate the worth of spraying and otherwise caring for an orchard in the proper way. S. J. Stowers has a good orchard and this is good because he takes care of it, cultivates it and sprays it the same as he does a crop. He also trims the trees, cutting back and removing the sprouts and otherwise deals with his fruit producers like a good husband-man should. He says that cultivating and spraying his orchard "makes it." He reported last week that he has a prospect for a crop of apples as good as he had in 1912 the "big" apple year. That was a time when there were so many apples that even the common trees and orchards bore so many that no one knew anything about what to do with them. But, at that, the men who had good orchards sold their product. There was a market for good apples but none for poor indifferent ones.

Mr. Stowers says that he ploughed his orchard last fall. This spring he disked it. That was a starter. Then, this spring he sprayed it. Then a little later he sprayed it again. The result is that his apple trees bear large numbers of fine apples that are well developed and are healthy and normal fruit. That he will find a good market for them there is no doubt. The fruit will be solid and wormless.

Then there is the other side of the story. There is a general complaint about there being "no apples" this year. What is wrong? The answer seems to be certainly the question of taking care of the orchard. A corn field unploughed and left to the weeds would not produce satisfactorily. Neither will apples.

Mr. Stowers has not always sprayed his orchard and at first he did not think as much of it as he does now. He says one year when his orchard was unsprayed, he offered to sell his output to a buyer for $800. The man said that if the orchard had been sprayed he would have offered $2500 for the crop. The result was that the buyer did not purchase at all. He says that it would be worth paying a man a hundred dollars to go out and spray the orchard and it can be done for much less. There is no more forcible illustration of the worth of properly handling an orchard than can be found in the statement by many that there are no apples and the sight of the Stowers orchard with the trees loaded to the limit.

Repairs Steamer

O. G. Dameron is at work on his White steamer which he expects to have out on the road soon. The steamer has been newly fitted and is a handsome specimen of workmanship and finish the kind that the White people have always indulged. The car is not made now as the Stanley people are the only ones that make a steam car. The steamer is a smooth-running car, the smoothest in the business and Mr. Dameron expects to have both speed and lack of vibration in his made-over car.

Get Cash Now

G. O. Clark, a farmer of Saline county, Mo., speaking about changes in raising and handling chickens, recalls how he had taken eggs to town in buckets and baskets and how the chickens were all hatched by hens, instead of by the incubator system as now. "The egg case is an innovation that is very convenient," he said. "But best of all, we now sell our chickens and eggs to a poultry buyer for cash instead of trading them to a country storekeeper for coffee and sugar as formerly."

F. W. Wehrli was kicked by a horse he was driving a week ago and has been laid up since with a gash cut in his leg by the animal's hoof. He was driving a gentle horse when a motorcycle came up from behind and frightened the horse which started to kick.

The immense crop of wheat all over the country except in this county, and the crop is much larger and better here than was supposed it would be, has had its effect on the market and the price is low, but taken with our corn crop prospect, the farmer will have plenty of spare change out of his profits for the year.

Beans, tomatoes and corn were helped in development by the rainfall. There has been a tremendous shortage of vegetables this year and the housewives have had a hard time, a mighty hard time at that to get anything to eat. Meat has been high but it has been meat, bread and potatoes or do without.

A Suffragist Idea

After much of the same kind of advice to other women, an American suffragist in an article in one of the magazines writes this:

"Don't make the stupid mistake thousands of women make. DON'T. Every woman thinks her husband is different. But trust a worldly woman, my dear, of much experience, men are all alike. They tire of what they know is entirely their own. The thing a man should never lose sight of is, that his wife is attractive to other men as well as to himself."

The Huntsville Herald man says that he will risk being considered sacrilegious, but he won't fall down and worship at the Rucker congressional shrine for "two more long years." This would imply that he has been on his knees at the point mentioned, heretofore. But what indication at the knees of his trouserloons is there that he has worshipped anywhere? The holes worn in the bottom of his pockets would be a better indication of the tin god he has been bowing before rather than frazzels at the knee his devotion to the most effective member of congress from Missouri.
