

Charged With Theft

Foreman Hastings, in charge of the men putting up the four steel bridges recently purchased by the county and who went to work the first of the week, was followed here by Miss Dora Phillips of Holton, Kans., Wednesday, who claimed that he had taken a diamond ring and some money from her. Hastings absented himself but through one of his men tendered the ring to the owner after she had sworn out a warrant for his arrest. By advice of the prosecuting attorney, the case has been settled out of court.—Salisbury Democrat.

Resolutions of Respect

Whereas, It has pleased Almighty God to remove from our midst, Sister Valle Parks, whose gentle manners, happy disposition and patient endurance through months and years of suffering has endeared her to the members of this order, be it Resolved, That we most deeply deplore the death of this sister in the very prime of life and that the Chapter of O. E. S. has lost one of its most respected members, be it further, Resolved, That these resolutions be spread upon the minutes of our chapter 155 and that a copy of the same be sent to the family and to the local papers.

The Public Laundry

If our industrial procedures and household practices remained unchanged from one generation to another, it might become far easier than it has been to control disease and stamp out familiar infections. No sooner, however, has one factor been controlled by some scheme of sanitation than changing custom has shifted the incidence of the supposedly eradicated danger and raised a new problem of health control. Thus, when laundry work was largely confined to the home, the possibility of infection was limited to a smaller group, and the opportunity for exposure to contagion easily appreciated and provided for. Today the handling of soiled clothes is being transferred more and more to special plants in which materials from many homes and still more individuals are brought together where employees come into contact with it. The possibility of infection under such conditions must vary for specific diseases, and depends on the probable readiness with which the micro-organisms concerned are transferred by soiled linen, and further on the efficiency of the laundry processes as a mode of sterilization. It is doubtless true that some of the more important disease germs are transmitted from individual to individual without any intermediate conveying device; nevertheless there are many infections, such as typhoid fever, venereal diseases, etc., which are known to be transmitted through fomites. So long as typhoid fever can be charged to the cook who has handled the food, it is difficult to conceive of a similar transmission through the laundry worker. The high temperature, soap, washing soda and other chemicals to which clothes in the laundry are subjected in the washing process are responsible for a sterilizing action. Bacteriologic examinations have repeatedly demonstrated that it is effective. Dr. Dederer, who represents the Committee on Occupational Diseases of the woman's department of the National Civic Federation, frankly states that there is no danger to public health from "mixed washing" of clothing with contaminated articles. It is pointed out, however, that while the washing process practically sterilizes the clothes, the re-infection of clean linen is possible when it is sorted and counted in the same room with soiled linen. Clean linen when exposed to infection through contact with soiled linen, may disseminate infection. The upshot of this is that soiled linen ought not to be received, sorted or marked in rooms in which clean linen is kept. Eating and drinking should be prohibited in rooms in which soiled linen is manipulated, and laundry workers should be instructed concerning the latent hygienic dangers which they may encounter in their work. Sanitary measures involving personal hygiene are essential for their own welfare as well as that of the public served, says The Journal of the American Medical Association. The problems involved have never received any serious attention from public authorities in this country; but the rapid growth in the laundry business is certain to awaken interest in them, as it has been aroused in the case of public restaurants, bakeries, food shops and other institutions which are assuming household functions.

NOT ENOUGH CHILDREN

ever receive the proper balance of food to sufficiently nourish both body and brain during the growing period when nature's demands are greater than in mature life. This is shown in so many pale faces, lean bodies, frequent colds, and lack of ambition. For all such children we say with unmistakable earnestness: They need Scott's Emulsion, and need it now. It possesses in concentrated form the very food elements to enrich their blood. It changes weakness to strength; it makes them sturdy and strong. No alcohol.

Why Men Are Bald

Dr. R. Reynolds, former health commissioner for Chicago, in an opinion on the subject, says the following concerning baldness: "The hats that men wear are the cause of their baldness above the hat line. Women also wear hats, but their hats are fastened to their hair and do not grip the head as men's hats do. All other causes of baldness such as infections, seborrhea, etc., affect both sexes alike and are, in fact, more difficult to treat locally in women than in men because of their long hair. "How does the hat affect the growth of hair in man? By compressing the arteries, the veins, the lymphatics, and to some extent the nerves that supply and nourish the hair. It is not because the hat is hard or soft that it keeps the head too hot. It is because the hat band compresses the vessels and starves the roots of the hair. Caps may do the same thing, but caps as a rule do not grip the head so tightly as hats do. "Baldness usually begins at the summit of the crown toward the back part, at the distant and weaker part of the vessels furnishing the circulation. In such cases the pressure has been on the side of the head. Sometimes the baldness begins above the forehead and is the high forehead type of baldness. In these cases the pressure has been upon the vessels of the forehead. Sometimes the head is bald low down in the back where the pressure has been upon the vessels in this region. When the head is completely bald on top the pressure has been on the entire vascular supply of the scalp."

No Pulpit Prohibition

Bishop Boyd Vincent of southern Ohio tells in the Church Messenger, Episcopal paper, why the Episcopal clergy will not introduce the subject of prohibition into their pulpits, and says on his own account that, "so far as prohibition has become a political issue, our Church's attitude on this is only a part of her general attitude of keeping politics out of the pulpit." If all of the clergy would adopt the practice of doing their political campaigning outside of the sacred edifice, it would not only redound to their credit but would make less confusion among their members. Differing with the pastor on the part of church members, whether that difference is openly expressed or secretly cherished, is destructive of that harmony and peace in which brethren are supposed to dwell, at least when they are in the dwelling.

Raps Washington Snobbery

In the February American Magazine a member of the House of Representatives is unusually frank in giving his opinion of Washington society. Among other things he says: "One evening my little boy came in and mentioned that the boy next door had refused to play with him stating as his reason: 'You folks are just renters, and don't own your own home like we do.' "It was a trivial matter, of course, but it reminded me that we were living in a hot bed of snobbery. The youngster next door had not thought up that himself. He had got it from some of his elders. I wonder if, in the event that we came to own our own home, my boy would have absorbed so much of the snobish atmosphere that he would brush by some other boy and tell him he was nothing but a renter. I can give you another line on the snobbery that prevails in the capital of our democratic nation when I tell you that two of the leading clubs in and about Washington bar from membership all persons who are 'in trade.' A man may be a highly educated, a well-bred, and accomplished gentleman, but if he owns an

Modest Petition

In a deeply religious family of Elgin, the eight-year-old son had been taught to ask a blessing at the table.

One afternoon there were a number of women asked to luncheon, and the kiddie, being a bit embarrassed, made the following brief petition:

"Oh Lord, forgive us for this food."

Crockett Atterbury of Mendon was in town the latter part of last week.
