She Disliked Steamboats

The wife of a physician who lives in Washington tells a story of a distant kinswoman who was her guest during the Christian Endeavor convention. The kinswoman lives in an inland New England town, and when she came to Washington she spent one night of the journey on board a steamboat. It was the first time she had ever traveled by water. She reached Washington ex-tramely fatigued. The doctor's wife re-

"Yes, I'm tired to death," said the kinswoman. "I don't know as I care to travel by water again. I read the card in my stateroom about how to put the life preserver on and I thought I understood it, but I guess I didn't, though. Some way, I couldn't seem to go to sleep with the thing on."

She Felt Resesured.

"What we want is to have money get ting into circulation. It's the duty," he said, excitedly, "of every citizen to exert himself to secure that end."

"John, dear," said his wife, "I'm se glad to hear you say so. I want to order ever so many things at the store, but I hesitated about doing it, for fear you wouldn't want to see the money getting out of your hands into circulation.

Queer Animal Pygmies.

Pygmies are not confined to the human race, but are found among the lower animals. One of the most remarkable of these dwarfs was a species of elephant which formerly lived on the island of Malta and in various parts of Italy, where its bones are now found. This creature, judging from the bones which have been col-lected, was about the size of a sheep, so we can imagine the baby pygmics, a perfect elephant not much larger than a cat; an enimal readily held in the open palm of a strong man's hand. Dwarf elephants are not unknown today, and several have been brought to this country, where they seem to develop wonderful intelligence.

The Shetland and other ponies are the pygmies among horses, and in the early days there was a horse hardly as large as a fox, if we may believe the evidence of the rocks which have preserved the remains of various fossil

A Remarkable Collector.

Arthur Hamilton, a wealthy and eccentric Englishman, has just died near Vienna, leaving behind him a remarkable series of collections, not the least singular of which consists of 20,000 buttons representing all the uniforms of the different armies of the world. Another collection is made of the teeth of all the most formidable wild beasts, while in contrast to this, are 852 fans which originally belonged to the most beautiful women in the world.

He Enjoys's Siesta While Neighbors Dig His Well.

Blairstown, N. J., has a clever old farmer, who has evidently read the story of how Tom Sawyer cajoled his friends into whitewashing the front fence for him. Blairstown's man of genius, however, made his friends dig its well gratts. His name is David Hennion, or "Uncle Dave," as he is familiarly known.

A few days ago he decided to sink a well, and, determining not to have fur ther trouble in obtaining water, made the well large and deep. He bought a windmill and then started to excavate. He went down and down, although the job was a slow and tedious one. Finaly he struck a splendid stream of water and prepared to line the well with stone. He carried a large quantity of stone to the well side and dumped it. The weight of the stones or something else caused the sides of the well to cave

"Uncle Dave" viewed the collapse with chagrin and disappointment, for it meant much more hard work on his part to clear the well again. Finally he struck an idea and proceeded to car-ry it into effect. He obtained his coat and placed it near the excavation, then he placed his hat on top of his coat. This done he sought the hay loft of his barn and secreted himself. The neighbors had taken considerable interest in the well, and it was not long before one of them came along to see how the work was progressing. He saw the half-filled well and the hat and coat close by. Believing the walls had fallen in on him, he rushed to the house and asked where "Uncle Dave" was Mrs. Hennion had not seen him and a search of the farm did not bring him to light. The conclusion was he was buried under the earth and stones in the well.

The neighbors for a great distance around were alarmed, and within a couple of hours twenty men were at work digging to clear the well and reseue the body of their neighbor. By morning they had the well cleared to the bottom, but found no trace of "Uncle Dave." The men, when they found they had nothing for their pains except a cleared well, went away weary and startled. When the coast was clear, "Uncle Dave" emerged from his hiding place to find his wife sitting beside the well hole, dazed and mystified. She was as much puzzled as any one. "Uncle Dave's" first greeting to her was: "Golly, Sally, I'm most starved; get me something to eat; but didn't those fellows work hard?"

How Bieyele Tubing Is Made

Solid iraw steel tubes have been made for years for boilers and general use, but the great demand arose when the safety type of bicycle came into vogue, the diamond frame requiring the use of a greater length of tubing and necessitating that this should be as light as possible. There are variations in the methods for producing a cold drawn steel tube, but the principle of all is practically the same. Only a very high class of steel is suitable for the purpose, and that hitherto employed has been chiefly Swedish charcoal steel, containing a certain proportion of carbon. The steel is taken in the form of a billet two feet long and about six inches in diameter. A hole is bored through the center and it is heated, an nealed and rolled into the form of a tube about 1% inches in diameter. with walls of about 10 gauge. This is then drawn through a die and over a mandrel by means of a draw-oeach, until about 800 feet long, beautifully amooth and bright both within and without. This is not drawn at once, but in a number of operations, and between each of 'hem the metal has to be repickled and reannealed to prevent the crystallization to which the drawing process tends to give rise. The first drawings of the tube leave it about three-eighths of an inch thick, but this gradually decreases until a tube is produced which is of the thickness of stout writing paper. This is the class of tube strength and rigidity out of all propor tion to its lightness.—Boston Transcript,

Vitality of Toads.

We have all read of the discovery of toads "in solid stratas of stone," where food and air sufficient to sustain life could not have possibly been had. We have not only read these stories, but the majority of us have put them down as Mulhatton yarns, which were written by someone who did not expect them to believed. Now comes the scientist M. Victor Lagroche, who says that he has imprisoned toads in masses of mixed plaster of Paris and found them well fat and hearty after a lapse of eight years.' He argues that if such creatures can live for years with air or light they "can continue to live on indefinitely."

"Early in the fall of 1994 I had, as I supposed, kidney trouble, and it was slowly and surely making headway in undermining my health for I was fast becoming unable to attend to my duties as a traveling salesman, my back seemed almost ready to break after riding any distance in beggy or sleigh. The bad feeling had been growing in my back for a period of five or six years, but I had not given it much attention, not supposing it to be anything but what would wear off. But in the fall above mentioned I was compelled to give my attention to it, for I had to stop traveling and go to doctoring myself. My efforts seemed fruitless. I grew worse and worse. My weight was decreasing. My blood was apparently growing poor and less in quantity.

"Just at this time, a friend, and he was a friend indeed, advised me to procure some of Dr. Williams' Pink Pilis and with little faith that they would do me any good, but out of respect for my friend's advice, (I thought it would do no harm at least) I ordered six boxes. I took them. My blood at once began to increase and I fer the first time in many weeks had a good night's sleep!

My improvement was noticeable from the start! My weight began to increase! My appetite grew! Happy? Well I think I was! I at last had found just what my system needed to defeat the robbers preying on my health and I thought it the time to be merry.

"I purchased another half dozen boxes and when they were gone, two more, which affectually cured me. I increased in weight until from what was almost nothing for me, I tipped the scales at 165 pounds, my present weight, and I owe it all to the Pink Pilis. May the knowledge of them he brought to all suffering as I did, for I know they will be benefited and cured, and I deem it a pleasure to recommend them.
