BY JOHN H. OBERLY & CO.

CAIRO, ILLINOIS, DECEMBER 22, 1870.

ONLY DAILY PAPER IN EGYPT.

The Bulletin. THURSDAY.

A CITIZEN of Auburn, N. Y., wants Congress to establish a National Veterinary college, to be supported by the government. He is supposed to be anticipating a professorship for Grant, to which the latter may retire upon the close of his Presidential career.

THE necessities of the Republican situation demand the admission of Colorado as a State, and Governor McCook insists that the Territory has a population of 60,000, which is just as good for two senators of the right stripe as a million and a half.

THE Saline county (Ill.) Register, of the 14th says: "The last spike was driven to close the White county gap in the Springfield and Southern railway last Tuesday, and Shawneetown now has railroad communication with the outer world."

THE Republican authorities of Florida undertake to count the ballot for state officers before the returns from all the counties were in. This would elect the Republican candidates. An injunction restraining the count was sued out, and the rest of the returns procured, and the Democratic candidates proved to be elected.

VENICE, opposite St. Louis, is soon to have an immense tannery and shoe factory employing 600 hands. It is to be erected by a stock company whose capital is to be $1,000,000. The process by which the leather to be tanned is to be called the vacuum process, requiring but a very brief space of time compared with the methods now in vogue.

THE New York Dispatch claims that the mitrailleur was invented about twenty years ago by John W. Chase, a notorious New York forger, swindler, bigamist and confidence operator. At one time he had about a dozen wives. Chase was so versatile in his evil ways that the invention was naturally suggested to his mind. He called the "centralized gun."

It is generally conceded, in West Virginia, that some portion of the debt of Virginia is justly chargeable to that State, and the Wheeling Register says there is no disposition among the people to shirk a fair settlement of the question at issue. The West Virginia legislature will meet next month, and will probably take definite action, with a view to an equitable division of the debt.

ALONG the Sierra Nevada, close to the line of the snow, a plant grows of sizes varying from an inch to two inches in thickness, and height to the dimensions of the largest cabbages. It is known as the snow cactus, and depends for moisture upon the melted snow. It has been recently proposed to treat the plant as a table vegetable, and it is said that, boiled and served as asparagus this cactus is found equally succulent and satisfactory.

AS MEASURES have been taken in Washington to enlarge the public printing office, all hope of reforms in the way of abolishing the franking privilege, the Congressional Globe and useless committee reports may be abandoned for the present. These subjects will undoubtedly be discussed in Congress occasionally, on the principle of casting a tub to a whale, but such fruitful trees of plunder will not be submitted to the axe of reform, as long as the Radicals are gathered together beneath their branches.

THE N. Y. Tribune contains the following pointed remarks on the Forty-first Congress. "The Forty-first Congress is not likely to go down to history with a very commendable reputation for good morals. Two of its members have been expelled for selling cadships, one resigned to escape expulsion, three or four others got off only by the hard swearing of their accomplices, one has convicted himself of attempting to procure counterfeit money to pass among the poor negroes, one is charged with cheating soldiers' widows out of their pensions, and now the indictment of another for bigamy is reported."

GIBBEY explains at last why it is that he favors general amnesty. He says that the exception of any particular class of Southerners from the benefits of such an act will only tend to increase their influence and exalt them to undue importance, "enabling them to strut their little hour as demi-gods through the short-sightedness of the Republican party." This is a novel view of the case, and says the least of it, and as soon as it comes to the knowledge of our Southern friends they will probably flood Congress with protests against, instead of petitions for, relief; that is, if the matter strikes them in the same way that it does the philosopher of the Tribune.

ALEXANDER DUMAS, the French novelist, who died on the 14th inst., commenced his labors as an author at the age of eighteen years, and produced one thousand two hundred volumes. It is doubtful whether more than a dozen of these will survive the personal recollections of the man. Much that he wrote, from the hasty manner with which it was composed, will add but little to his literary reputation. Several of his novels were works of superior merit as works of fiction, and amongst these may be named the fascinating "Count of Monte Christo," "Margaret of Anjou," "Vicomte Bragelone," and the "Memoirs of a Physician." Of late years Dumas wrote comparatively little, and was noted as a bon vivant, and a literary idler. He was the son of a French Republican General, and the grandson of a Haytian negro girl, and he exhibited in a marked degree the characteristics of his African ancestry, except in color. Notwithstanding this he moved in the most cultivated society of the French capital.

THE ALABAMA CLAIMS.

A Hoax of Settlement.

Among the late Washington dispatches we find the following, the value of which our readers can determine as well as we:

The New York Tribune's Washington correspondent telegraphs: "There are strong reasons, from an authentic source, of believing that an amicable adjustment of our differences with England, in connection with the Alabama claims, will not be delayed for a much longer period. Also, it is believed that Gen. Schenck will, soon after his arrival in England, resume negotiations now suspended, and that they will be carried forward in a firm and friendly manner, and that the English Government will not insist upon a frank and open settlement of the question. The temper of the British people is thought to be favorable at this time for the success of the undertaking. The following is believed to be the points upon which the negotiations will be made. The United States as basis of settlement will require:

1st.—That England shall pay the owners for the ships and property destroyed by the Alabama, with the interest on the value of the same from date of the destruction.

2d.—That England shall reimburse the United States government for all expenses incurred by the United States in consequence of the Alabama and other cruisers.

3d.—That England shall make a public recognition of the true principles of neutrality on the basis of their settlement.

It is thought that the United States will not demand constructive damages, in any event. Other sources of information, from those alluded to above, substantially confirm this statement of the subject. General Schenck will make no extortionate demands. He is not to threaten intercourse, or forcible annexation of Canada, nor is he to demand a confession from Great Britain that she has acted dishonorably toward the United States. A confession that no proud nation would make, unless conquered and reduced to extremities. There is good authority for stating that General Schenck is expected to demand nothing more than a prompt and equitable settlement of our actual money losses, and that there will be no talk of damages for injured honor in the diplomatic negotiations which he is to open and conduct. The reparation which he will be instructed to ask, it is believed, will be willingly accorded by the English government. The erroneous impression prevailing with regard to General Schenck's mission places him in a false attitude at the outset which is not very pleasant for him to occupy.

TERRIBLE ADVENTURE

A Fearful Ride on Car Coupling.

Captain McArthur, of Kingston, Canada, had a fearful adventure on the Grand Trunk last week. He got up from his seat and walked out to the platform when the train was near Lancaster, to find out how near he was to the station. He overbalanced himself and fell, but managed to save his life by catching the coupling, and there he hung by his arms in a position which offered him very little hope of recovering the platform above, in the one case, and a sure and awful death were he to drop off, in the other. No one could be placed in a more agonizing position. Through his great strength, being of strong muscular power, he held himself up while the train traveled four miles, undergoing the greatest mental as well as bodily suffering. No one discovered his danger, as it was night and very dark. When his strength was exhausted, and he saw a bridge or tunnel on the track ahead which would increase the danger of his situation, he proposed for the inevitable plunge, and with a prayer of despair upon his lips he let go his hold. Instant death would have followed in ninety-nine cases out of a hundred, but providentially Mr. McArthur fell, more dead than alive, into a hollow or excavation in the track. The train passed over safely, and he laid there unconscious from his injuries and suffering for seven hours. After daylight his rescuers came back, and once more he entered into the contemplation of an awful situation. He was unable to walk, but dragged himself on hands and feet to a house quite far off—some say two miles—and he got that care and assistance which his condition required. A friend he discovered who lived near by, and he proved a friend indeed, caring for him as a brother. His arms and side were quite black from the muscular exertion he was subjected to, his boots and a portion of his trousers were torn off, and his feet lacerated by being dragged along the track. He got a severe injury in the back also by his fall. His body presented a dreadful sight. The Kingston Whig says, on Thursday morning he was brought home, and now lives at his residence under the care of Dr. Yates. His injuries have been very severe, but the doctor hopes to bring him through safely.

HOW TO CONVINCING A JUROR.

A Sample of Civilization in California.

Some of the Jurors and Defendants in the Jury Room.

[From the Alta California.]
A scene occurred in the Twentieth District Court, yesterday, its parallel being unknown in the history of trials on this coast, and probably the like of which has never occurred in any other court of justice.

It will be recollected that the jury in the O'Connor murder case were sent out to deliberate on their verdict about 1 o'clock Saturday afternoon. They were brought into court several times, but stated that they were unable to agree, and were always sent out again. His Honor, Judge McKinstry, was evidently of the opinion that there was nothing in the case which would prevent an honest jury from agreeing on a verdict. For a day or two past I have been generally understood that the jury stood eleven for conviction and one for acquittal. The name of this one appeared to be known, and his standing by those who know him was freely discussed. At a quarter after one o'clock, yesterday afternoon, the jury were brought into court. All looked weary and exhausted. Judge McKinstry stated that if any of the jurors had anything to say he would listen to them.

Wm. Hosford, one of the jurors, arose and addressed the Court substantially as follows:

I was told last night that if I did not decide so and so, by another juror, it would be worse for me. This morning, while lying in bed, this man (pointing to Mr. Howard) stood over me and threatened if I did not decide with him he would shoot me or put me to pieces. Under these circumstances, if I should render a verdict in accordance with the desire of this gentleman, it would be very wrong for me to do so, and I don't desire to sleep there again, because I don't think the man is safe, from the way he has acted.

H. C. Howard—I deny the charges; there is no truth in them.

Judge McKinstry—I don't care about hearing the merits of the matter. If there is any juror who has any weapons on his person, let him surrender them at once to the Sheriff.

Mr. Howard then took from under his jacket a bowie-knife, and from his back pocket a deringer, which he handed to the Sheriff.

Judge McKinstry—It shocks the sense of decency that a juror should go into the jury-room with weapons.

Mr. Howard—I deny the charges. I have carried arms since the law was repealed.

William Hosford—Furthermore, he stood over my bed this morning with a pen-knife, and did the same thing. Rather than go there, and sleep another night in his company, I will agree with them upon a verdict, and do it under protest; and I do it against my conscience.

H. C. Howard—It is not so.

William Hosford—Your Honor can ask the juror alongside of me.

Judge McKinstry asked what their prospects were.

Howard—I desire to represent to your Honor that an agreement is impossible. We have stood eleven to one since last Sunday.

Judge McKinstry—This defendant will have to be retried, and I do not desire to comment on the case. I did not suppose there was anything in the case to prevent you from finding a verdict. The law supposes that when you go out to deliberate you will agree. It is strange that a juror should go into the jury room armed, and on the other hand, the story told seems exceedingly improbable. It could not be that ten jurors would sit by and see one of their number assassinated. What is the consequence if such things are carried on? Gentlemen, you are discharged. I will state that, soon after the jury went out, I was told in a quiet way, that there was a man on the jury that would hang it. This ended one of the most remarkable episodes in jury duty. The Court, attorneys, and the crowded court room of spectators were all astonished on hearing the strange revelations, and it was the subject of considerable comment. The jury were out longer than any jury has ever been kept out in this country, having been out ninety-six hours. They stood eleven for manslaughter and one (Hosford) for acquittal. Several jurors stated that Hosford's statement was not true.
