

THE OTHER GREAT ROAD.

Possibly under the inspiration of that Arabian Way the Eustis Lake Region proposes a model road from Jacksonville to Kissimmee by the way of Starke, Gainesville, Ocala, Leesburg, Eustis and Orlando.

Such a road would be of perhaps more benefit to this section of the state than any improvement that could be suggested. The reasons are numerous. In the first place, that the roads are needed locally, and needed badly, is self-evident.

The remainder of the distance is divided among no less than eight counties, and they are some of the best counties of the state. In some ways the route that this road would take would be a more pleasing one than the road down the east coast.

Six Sermons.

I do not know of any way so sure of making another happy as being so one's self.—Sir Arthur Helps.

What a man sees only in his best moments as truth, is truth in all moments.—Joseph Cook.

To us also, through every star, through every blade of grass, is not a God made visible if we will open our minds and eyes.—Carlyle.

If wrinkles must be written on the brows, let them not be written on the heart. The spirit should never grow old.—Garfield.

The refinement is not mere outside polish. It is purity, gentleness, and grace in the heart, which like the perfume of a flower, breathes out and bathes all the life in sweetness.—Anon.

The thing men say is, "I have done the best I can." It is an awful thing for a man to say. The man never lived, save, He who perfected our humanity, who ever did the very best he could.—Brooks.

THE GOD OF ELIJAH.

Every seat was occupied at the Jewish synagogue Sunday afternoon to listen to the sermon of Rev. L. B. Warren on the above named subject.

It will be remembered that Elijah was raised up by God to be set like a wall of brass in opposition to idolatry. Having offended Ahab, God commanded Elijah to conceal himself beyond the Jordan and he, having faith, obeyed and was fed for a considerable length of time by the ravens.

At a latter period he met Ahab and challenged him to gather the people together that they might determine by a sign from Heaven which was the true God, Ahab's or Elijah's. The altar was erected, the sacrifice of bullocks placed upon it. The prophets of Ahab led upon it and cried unto Baal to send down fire from Heaven and consume it. Elijah ridiculed them and said "Cry aloud, for he is God; either he is talking or he is pursuing or he is on a journey or per adventure he is on a path and must be awakened." Elijah then cried to his God and fire descended from Heaven and the altar was consumed.

Elijah was one of the most eminent and illustrious of the Jewish prophets. His character is marked by a moral grandeur and Mr. Warren drew a striking and appropriate lesson from his life.

Notwithstanding Elijah lived in an idolatrous age and among an idolatrous people and even his wife Jezebel worshipped the prophets of Baal, Elijah stood resolutely and unflinchingly by for the worship of the God of his fathers and was honored as no other man for he was translated from earth to Heaven in a chariot of fire.

Every one was well pleased with the elegant way in which Mr. Warren handled his subject and were in every way delighted with him.

More Riots.

Disturbances of strikers are not nearly as grave as an individual disorder of the system. Overwork, loss of sleep, nervous tension will be followed by utter collapse, unless a reliable remedy is immediately employed. There's nothing so efficient to cure disorders of the kidneys or liver as Electric Bitters. It's a wonderful tonic, and adjuvant nerve and the greatest all round medicine for run down systems. It dispels nervousness, rheumatism and neuralgia, and expels malarial germs. Only 50c. and satisfaction guaranteed by the Anti-Monopoly Drug Store, and Tydings and Co.

Watterson on Bryan and Cleveland.

Of course we no more expect Mr. Cleveland to take this advice than we expect Mr. Bryan to take the advice which from time to time, in a perfectly friendly spirit, we have urged upon him. Both Mr. Cleveland and Mr. Bryan are professional politicians. Both of them have been candidates for office since they came of age. Mr. Cleveland grew rich and wrecked the party, which had loaded him with honors. Mr. Bryan has grown rich and apparently to justify himself, would continue the wreckage. A gleam of unselfish self-denial in either might have saved the party. A gleam in Mr. Bryan might yet save it. But we shall have nothing from Mr. Cleveland but the old posing for effect, from Mr. Bryan but the old posing for effect; the role of one, the sturdy patriot disclaiming subterfuges and concessions; each of them an ambitious, arrogant man, playing his opportunity and working his party for all he thinks they will stand for and are worth.

It is in a small way but a repetition of the history of the world from the beginning of time; useless sacrifices, grandiose pretensions, lost opportunities; little great men and great little men alternating in the strife of factions and the struggle for preferment; truth gone glimmering, and the mass and body of humankind, the misted, misused people, left to hold the bag and pay the bills!—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Who Can Cuss Loudest.

It is now generally conceded that the Hon. Jefferson B. Browne and Congressman Robert W. Davis will cross words in the gubernatorial fight, and the railroads are apt to fall heir to the usual amount of "cussing." The candidate doing the most of this is likely to win the prize.—Albert Williamsop's Floridian.

RACE PREJUDICE.

In his great speech on the Race Issue, Senator Tillman made the following quotation from Max Muller, the famous Sanskrit scholar.

It will be seen that the question of race antipathy is not peculiar to the southern people nor is it confined to them.

Mr. Muller says:

As soon as we trace the complicated system of caste, such as we find it in India at the present day, back to its first beginnings, we find that it flows from at least three different sources, and that accordingly we must distinguish between ethnological, political, and professional caste.

Ethnological caste arises wherever different race came in contact. There is and always has been a mutual antipathy between the white and the black man, and when the two are brought together, either by conquest or migration, the white man has invariably asserted his superiority, and established certain social barriers between himself and his dark-skinned brother. The Aryas and the Sudras seem to have felt this mutual antipathy. The difference of blood and color was heightened in ancient times by difference of religion and language; but in modern times also, and in countries where the negro has learned to speak the same language and to worship the same God as his master, the white man can never completely overcome the old feeling that seems to lurk in his very blood and makes him recoil from the embrace of his darker neighbor. And even where there is no distinction of color, an analogous feeling, the feeling of race, asserts its influence, as if inherent in human nature. Between the Jew and the Gentile, the Greek and the barbarian, the Saxon and the Celt, the Englishman and the foreigner, there is something—whether we call it hatred, or antipathy, or mistrust, or mere coldness—which in a primitive state of society would necessarily lead to a system of castes, and which, even in more civilized countries, will never be completely eradicated.

Flagler and Florida.

At a dinner party given at Palm Beach Hon. Wayne McVeagh was one of the guests and gave the following toast to Mr. H. M. Flagler:

"We have all enjoyed this transformation of Florida. Mr. Flagler came here many years ago. I first knew Florida in 1875 and what an extraordinary transformation has occurred in those twenty-five years! I really doubt whether anybody else in the United States would have kept making this transformation but the host of the evening. We are all enjoying Mr. Flagler's wealth without it costing us anything, and so will everybody else who comes here year after year. I want to ask you all to join me, gentlemen, in drinking to a long life and continued prosperity to H. M. Flagler."

DeLand News.

Only Another Falsehood Mailed.

While Mr. Porter is making his attack on the Philadelphia philanthropist, will he be just and fair and permit the Record to print a private interview he had with a DeLand gentleman upon a recent visit to this place? The Record, however, will not get that permission. Its publication would paralyze some of the reverend's friends. His editorials in the Baptist Witness do not at all accord with the sentiments expressed privately while at DeLand.—Volusia County Record.

OCALA, Fla., March 14, 1903.

Editor News—I wrote to Editor Prevatt of the Record the first of this week requesting him to publish that "private interview" he claimed to have from me and which he seemed to think that he would not get my permission to print, as it might paralyze some of my friends, but as he has failed to comply with my request, I now ask permission to state to the public in general, and the people of DeLand in particular, through the columns of your paper, that the statement in the Record of last week (Saturday, March 7), that I gave out an opinion to a DeLand gentleman during my recent visit to that city on the Stetson University trouble contrary to that expressed in my recent editorial in the Baptist Witness is absolutely false and was evidently manufactured to delude the people and break the force of my argument. If Editor Prevatt thinks that such tactics as this will win friends to his side of this unpleasant and much to be deplored controversy, he has certainly placed too low an estimate upon the good taste and moral uprightness of the intelligent people of Florida. Yours truly,

J. C. PORTER.

WEEDS

Consumption is a human weed flourishing best in weak lungs. Like other weeds it's easily destroyed while young; when old, sometimes impossible.

Strengthen the lungs as you would weak land and the weeds will disappear.

The best lung fertilizer is Scott's Emulsion. Salt pork is good too, but it is very hard to digest.

The time to treat consumption is when you begin trying to hide it from yourself. Others see it, you won't.

Don't wait until you can't deceive yourself any longer. Begin with the first thought to take Scott's Emulsion. If it isn't really consumption so much the better; you will soon forget it and be better for the treatment. If it is consumption you can't expect to be cured at once, but if you will begin in time and will be rigidly regular in your treatment you will win.

Scott's Emulsion, fresh air, rest all you can, eat all you can, that's the treatment and that's the best treatment.

We will send you a little of the Emulsion free. Be sure that this picture is the same as a label on the wrapper of every bottle of Emulsion you buy. SCOTT & BOWNE, Chemists, 409 Pearl St., N. Y. See and $10 all druggists.
