

THE PEBBLE AND THE ACORN

"I am a pebble and yield to none!"
Were the willing words of a tiny stone.

"There's none that can tell about my birth.

For I'm old as the big round earth.
The children of men arise and pass Out of the world, like blades of grass.

The acorn was shocked at this rude salute.

She never before had been so near This gravely ball, the mundane sphere;

But to give reproof of a nobler sort Than the angry look, or keen retort.

From the lighter element where I grew Down to another, so hard and new.

Has never subdued, or made to feel."
And soon, in the earth she sank away

But it was not long ere the soil was broke By the peering head of an infant oak.

The pebble looked up, and, wondering said "A modest acorn never to tell Which proves that nothing could hide its worth.

"And, oh, how many will tread on me.
To come and admire the beautiful tree.

Above such a worthless thing as I, Useless and vain, a cumberer here.

IT PAYS TO ADVERTISE

When the dimpled baby's hungry, what does the baby do?

The lamb lost on the hillside when darkness closes round

Until the shepherd hears it, and, hearing, kindly heeds.

The fair and gentle maiden who loves the bashful boy.

Assumes when in his presence a manner that is coy;

For all time the question's settled—It pays to advertise.

FLORIDA AS SEEN IN 1826
BY GOVERNOR W. P. DUVAL

Highly Amusing Description Furnished Superintendent of Indian Affairs Then Why the State Was Kept Back.

(From the Pensacola Journal.)

Some of the early descriptions of Florida are highly amusing in view of what is now known of the state

Col. Fred L. Robertson of Tallahassee, who has a penchant for probing into dusty records and forgotten history,

Governor Duval's Report in 1826

Florida Agency (now Ocala).
February 22, 1826.
Col. Thomas L. McKenny, General Superintendent of Indian Affairs:

I have now the honor after a faithful and laborious examination of their lands for thirteen days, to make the following report.

This long swamp is near six miles long, very narrow and entirely too wet for cultivation, except 30 or 40 acres at its southern extremity, Akahumky signifies in our language one pond. It is an Indian town. The land is too poor for cultivation and there is very little good land in its neighborhood.

Big Hammock is Described The big hammock is situated near this town. I spent some days in examining it and was greatly disappointed in its fertility, extent and supposed advantages.

Col. Robertson's Comment Commenting upon this remarkable letter, Col. Robertson says:

"You will see when you read it that the Indians knew a lot more than they got credit for. For ingenuity and skill it beat Dido. Take your map of Florida and trace the line and if you know anything at all of the country you will appreciate the cunning of the plan and the skill with which it was carried out.

"The Indian chief who piloted the governor met him at the agency near Fort King, now Ocala, and led him down by the long swamp at the lower end of which was the lone Indian settlement. A few miles further lay the town of Okahumpkee, not very far from the station now bearing the same name.

I did not travel but a short distance on the military road south. I left it near Okechumpy, and examined the country to the right of the road as far as Tampa Bay.

After leaving the agency the lands on the big and the little Withlacoochee are poor and the lands on the Hillsborough river within the Indian boundary are of so little value that there is not one Indian settlement on any one of them.

I did not visit the Peas Creek. I had suffered so much from drinking water alive with insects, from mosquitoes, intolerable hot weather, and my horses were so reduced by the journey and the swarms of horse flies that I determined to leave that point unexplored, having received satisfactory information that there is but a small tract of good land in that quarter.

Wretched Land Near Chicuchatty

I have never seen a more wretched tract of country than that which I entered five or six miles south of Chicuchatty.
The sand hills rise very high and the Indian trail winds on the extensive sand ridge for eight or nine miles. The whole of the timber for this distance as far as the eye can survey has been killed by fire, the burnt and blackened pines without a leaf, added to the dreary poverty of the sand, presents the most miserable and gloomy prospect I ever beheld.

After descending the southern extremity of this ridge I entered a low, wet, piney country, spotted with numerous ponds. I had much difficulty to pass through them, although the season has been uncommonly dry.
Had much rain fallen I never could have reached Tampa Bay in that direction. So low was the whole country as far as the Indian boundary extended towards Tampa Bay, that after riding all day and until eleven o'clock at night in hope that I would find a dry spot to sleep upon, I was compelled to take up my lodging on a low-wet place for the night.

No settlement can ever be made in this region and there is no land in sight worth cultivation. The best of the Indian lands are worth but little.
Nineteen-twentieths of the whole country within the present boundary is by far the poorest and most miserable region I ever beheld.

I have, therefore, to advise as my duty demands, and the honor and humanity of my country requires; that the big swamp be also given to the Indians and that the northern side be five miles north of the big swamp, and extend to the Oklawaha river, east, and so far west as to include the big hammock. This line will take in no good land but the big swamp of any consequence, but by extending it into the Pine Barren five miles it will keep off settlers from the Indian boundary who would otherwise crowd near the line and sell whiskey to the Indians.

The Pine Barren between the south end of Alachua and the big swamp is poor and never can be cultivated. The distance is about twenty-five miles.
The big swamp is six miles long and is about two miles wide, and is healthy, high, rich land.

I have the honor to remain,
Your obedient servant.
WM. P. DUVAL.

over what are now known as the 'Sand Mountains.' When he completed this part of his trip he struck what have been called the 'Slashes,' which extend well down toward the big Withlacoochee river.

The Chief "Showed" the Governor

"In addition to being a skilled guide I am inclined to think that Indian was also 'some on geography.' The governor speaks of 'Chicuchatty or Red house!' He is evidently referring to Charcochatta or Red Council House, a noted council house among the Indians. The Indian made geography for the governor because that council house was in what is now Hernando county.

The old council house stood at the foot of a beautiful and high hill, one and one-half miles south of Brooksville, and on the margin of a beautiful, deep, clear lake, now called Irvin Lake. The Charcochatta hammock is about twelve miles long by an average of five in width. It is heavily timbered with oak in several varieties and other hard woods. The trend of the hammock is to the southwest of Brooksville. The Annattaliga or Black Dirt hammock stretches away for a little over 13 miles. This hammock averages between six and seven miles in width and is also heavily timbered with a great variety of hard wood trees.

"The fact that the governor mentions the Big and Little Withlacoochee in close conjunction shows that he never crossed the Withlacoochee at all, but he evidently thought he was making a careful examination of the Charcochatta and Annattaliga Hammocks. That was a wily Indian. For thirteen days he steered the governor so skillfully that the old gentleman never got in sight of any good land except the tract the Indian wanted him to see."
