

MOST DANGEROUS ANIMAL IN THE WORLD

The common house fly is the most dangerous animal in the world. It kills more people than all other animals combined. It does it by carrying disease germs as typhoid fever, cholera infantum, tuberculosis, etc. It breeds in manure, privy vaults and filth so that it is loaded up with germs from the first. The place that it makes for is the kitchen and on to the food where it leaves a trail of the germs from the manure, privy vault or other filth that it may have been in. When the germs get on to the food they are sure to get into our bodies and if we are not in the best of health and vigor the disease is apt to get a start and to run its course. It is not safe to eat food that the flies have been on. They must be kept out of our houses if we are to keep well and especially if baby is to escape cholera infantum, which is a summer disease as that is the only time that the flies are around to carry the germs. In town it is not so difficult to get rid of flies as there the manure and filth that they breed in can be removed.

AFTER DAIRY CATTLE

Having heard of the drought and the lack of forage Missourians are in North Dakota after dairy cattle. They figure the people will be foolish enough to part with their stock and take a chance of securing others next spring. Wisconsin, northern Minnesota, both Dakotas and Wyoming are being invaded by the Missourians, says the Fargo Forum. They are seeking to purchase 100 carloads. They expect to secure them on an average price of $35 per head. These cattle are to be turned over to the dairymen of Missouri, who have a great abundance of feed.

It is nice and thoughtful of the Missourians to come all the way up here to North Dakota to take away dairy cattle. Few Flickertails will be foolish enough to part with their herds. While it is true that forage is scarce it will be cheaper to purchase feed and keep the cattle than to sell the animals for any kind of a price—much less the low figures the Missourians expect to pay.

To dispose of a $60 or a $75 cow for half its value when it could be kept for $10 or $15 worth of feed would not be very good financing. Then having sold the cattle this fall, next year when the North Dakota farmers wanted to restock they would have to pay exorbitant prices for anything they got. There would be difficulty in securing sound and healthy animals and those purchased would not be acclimated.

The dairying industry in North Dakota is in its merest infancy. Its development should be rapid, now that the farmers are beginning to appreciate some of its advantages. In a few years it should add annually hundreds of thousands of dollars to the income of the people who are engaged in the work.

To insure success every head of dairy cattle now in the state should be retained.

HAD ARM CAUGHT BY LARGE BELT

ALBERT LEE HAD HIS ARM CAUGHT IN THRESHING RIG SATURDAY—FLESH TORN AND BONES ARE BROKEN

Albert Lee, a young man living near Squires, met with a terrible accident last Saturday. He was separator man for the crew and while working around the machine he in some way got his hand caught between one of the pulleys and the belt. The flesh was torn from the end of the thumb to the elbow and both bones were broken. The flesh was also badly burnt. Before he could be liberated the machine had to be stopped and a pulley removed. He was brought to Williston for treatment and placed in the hospital. He is getting along as well as could be expected and his arm may be saved.

Almost a Dead One

A reader of the Graphic received a letter recently from a friend of his down east and it was full of complaints and regrets. Complaints with his present surroundings and regrets over the fact that he had a chance to come to Williston and failed to grasp the opportunity. He stated in his letter that if he ever revived, or came to life again he would write. Now what do you think of that?

There is at least a little hope left for him in that he realizes he is a dead one. He must have been near the dead line when he turned down his chance to come to this city. Instead of coming west he invested in a Meat Market way down east. Who ever started him in that direction gave him a bum steer and he realizes it now. He says the weather is hot enough there to melt a wooden Indian. We will venture to say that it don't faze him, for anyone but a wooden man would have seen his chance when offered and "Gone West to Grow up With the Country." He says he don't know whether to live in hope or die in despair. Well, before doing the latter he had better sell his meat market, get a (steak) and come to Williston, just to see what golden opportunities he missed by not heeding the call of his friends.

Fire Yesterday

A fire started from the chimney of the cottage in the Wittmeier addition occupied by A. B. Cary and family yesterday noon and caused considerable excitement. The fire had not gained much headway when discovered and was easily extinguished without a great deal of damage being done.

Examination

There will be an examination for railway mail clerks on Oct. 5th at the Williston postoffice. There is a shortage of eligibles in the State of North Dakota and those wishing to take the examination can obtain blanks and other information by writing to J. M. Shoemaker, Secy. 8th dist., civil service board, St. Paul, Minn.

You wouldn't move into a store so small that you couldn't display half your stock—so don't try to advertise in half-enough space, either!

"I'VE SPOILED MY STEW."
administering a dose of the condiment the stopper shot into the stew and with it spurted half the bottle's contents.
"There! I've spoiled my stew," piped the beauteous one. "I'll have to have another."
Little Tim, alert to the size of the joint wad of a dollar, reached for the girl's ruined stew, plumped it before Colonel Mike, grabbed Colonel Mike's untasted and unadorned stew and, placing it before the girl, soothingly said:
"No, no, girlie. Colonel Mike never eats an oyster stew without sousing it with catchup. He likes 'em that way—don't you, Mike?"
Mike said he did and took his medicine like a man.

SAVED THE STEW.

Quick Wit When to Falter Meant a Financial Crisis.

The late Little Tim Sullivan, one time pride of the Bowery and potent factor in New York politics, was always resourceful even in his youth. When a lad on festive occasions Little Tim knew what o'clock it was. He and Colonel Mike Padden, secretary of state in the Sullivan cabinet, were at an east side ball with two of the rosy cheeked lasses of that neighborhood of peachy young women.

Little Tim and Colonel Mike had between them exactly $1—no more, no less. Supper time came. Before taking the girls into the supper room Little Tim and Colonel Mike secretly scanned the bill of fare and found that four oyster stews at 25 cents each would just fit their pile. Little Tim blandly and innocently impressed this conclusion upon the young girls. Anything Little Tim said was accepted as the top notch of hospitality. The four stews were before the little party. One of the girls liked catchup. While

Don't Buy Shoes That Need Stretching

Whenever a shoe has to be stretched, you can be sure that its going to run over the edges of the soles. And in time the uppers will leave the soles entirely.

Plenty of leather should be allowed at the ball of the foot so that stretching isn't necessary. The foot should rest comfortably in a new shoe the minute it's put on.

The Bradley Shoe

is built to fit right from the start. Every pair has the proper allowance of leather at the ball of the foot.

Keep in mind this determining fact: that a store that does not "make good" in value-giving CAN NOT AFFORD TO ADVERTISE. That fact will simplify the buying problem for you.
