TALE OF "MOTHER HUBBARD"

Its First Entrance into Hawaii and the Eternal Favor Which It Gained Thereby.

There is a story, vouched for by an American, who lives in Hawaii, of the influence of the Mother Hubbard there.

Years ago, the story goes, an American was organizing a sewing class among the native Hawaiian women. At that time they gowned themselves in seaweed and strings of shells, and the American wanted to teach them to make more substantial clothes for their own use.

The Mother Hubbard had but recently made its appearance, and a pattern of this new and simple garment was sent to the worker in Hawaii. Hawaiian women by the score emerged from seaweed fringe into cotton Mother Hubbards, and a white cotton gown modeled on this famous original became practically the national feminine attire of the islands.

To this day you cannot persuade a native Hawaiian woman of the lower classes that the Mother Hubbard is not the native dress of American women. They have never changed their habit of wearing a cotton Mother Hubbard as a badge of civilization.

Will Kill Germs on Pencils. Of the 50,000 school children in this country who are the annual victims of preventable disease, there is no doubt that a goodly per cent of them contracted disease from the habit of sucking the points of pencils passed from hand to hand.

To prevent this transmission of deadly germs of preventable diseases a new device has just been invented, says an exchange.

It is a specially constructed rack upon which pencils collected from the children can be placed with the tips resting in sockets where they are acted upon by a formalin gas disinfectant, which kills all germs.

To get the best and safest results two sets of pencils should be kept on hand. While one set is in use the other can be undergoing disinfecting. Thus by changing pencils twice a day the danger of the spread of germs can be cut in half.

Dorothy's Peril.

One day, when Dorothy's mother was reading to the little maid, she came to the word "gravitation." She explained its meaning, but thought the child would forget it. Consequently she was much surprised when, a few days later, Dorothy came running in, crying: "Oh, mother! it's such a good thing for me there's a law of gravitation! If there wasn't I'd have surely tumbled head over heels into Heaven just now!"
