Baseball teams have been organized wrestling is already a popular diversion. Football teams will be in the in all parts of camp. Boxing and spotlight soon.

There is a world of star athletic material among the recruits. In a recent baseball game between the Des Moines Western League champions and a camp team, every soldier-player in the lineup was at one time member of some professional baseball league. In a recent track meet held between the members of two companies college stars from all parts of the country participated.

Every man is expected to learn the fundamentals of boxing and for that reason "Mike" Gibbons, well known fistic champion, will come to Camp Dodge about the middle of the month to take charge of the boxing. Camp Athletic Director Griffith has announced that all recruits will have to take part in some kind of sport. General Plummer has ordered that one full hour a day be allotted to athletics. Director Griffith plans to import some of the French army games that have been developed since the war started. These games are designed to cultivate agility in the recruit just as boxing helps a man to be a better bayonet fighter. Those who prefer the games of football, basketball, boxing, wrestling and kindred active sports will have a chance to take any one of them during the hour. But if not, the recruit will have to go into these special army games.

So much athletics, with several scores of football teams, a few hundred boxing matches, etc., is going to require a great deal of athletic equipment. The army does not supply it. Therefore a big campaign is being conducted to raise money to buy the stuff for the soldiers. High schools in the four states represented at Camp Dodge are asked to give a part of their athletic receipts to the fund. High schools are urged to give entertainments to raise money. All athletic contests in Des Moines will contribute a share of the returns.

The hope is to furnish each company at the cantonment one or more boxes of sports goods. A box consists of the following equipment: Six ball bats, twelve baseballs, one chest protector, one catcher's mask, one catcher's mitt, one first baseman's glove, six association footballs (to be used for soccer, volleyball or basketball), two extra bladders, a lacing and pump for same, two Rugby footballs, two sets of quoits with posts, six playground balls, four playground bats, two six-pound medicine balls, three official whistles, ten sets of boxing gloves and a set of rule books. The only thing these 12,000 men have to fear now is tuberculosis. A special staff of physicians have been selected to examine every man at the Camp for tuberculosis.

Many notable men nationally will visit Camp Dodge during the winter. This will include leading figures in the sports, the theatrical, the educational and the government circles. One of the first will be former President Taft, who is scheduled to speak in Des Moines on October 20. While he is here it is planned to hold the first public parade of National army soldiers. General Plummer has announced that the battalion which shows the best efficiency at drill by that date will be selected to parade before Taft in Des Moines.

Gourd Family Is Important.

The gourd family furnishes the human families with many edible fruits, and it is believed that pumpkins and squashes are of American origin, though in novise certain. On the other hand, it is known that watermelons, muskmelons, cucumbers and all that branch of the family are of Asiatic origin. Yet all countries have native species of this great family.

ENJOYED A BIG HUNT

A party of hunters arrived here the latter part of the week to participate in the fine hunting that can only be found in a territory where opportunities of all kinds, not only in hunting, but in many other ways, abound, says the Wildrose Mixer.

The party was comprised of L. C. Wingate and O. J. Helland, Williston bankers; M. E. Wilson of Minneapolis, president of a line of banks; M. D. Cottrill, a gentleman from Chicago and Paul R. McKee and Mr. Keller from Wisconsin.

Friday the company with Banker Urseth, who assumed the role of host for the party, went to the Big Meadow territory and tributary country, and a fine bag of ducks was the result of the shooting. They were placed in condition for proper eating—the ducks, not the hunters—at the Bistodeau Cafe Saturday evening and the expanding of the gentlemen's girth attested to the fact, the assertion that they had never before eaten so well prepared viands, was well founded.

Sunday they went out again and report a good bag. They took along with them 45 ducks, besides a number of the birds which were consumed as food by the party.

The gentlemen were loud in the praise of the fine sport they had had in this neighborhood during their brief hunt here and were much impressed with the general fine aspect of this community in general.

LES LEGERTS TELL OF NARROW ESCAPE IN SUBMARINE ZONE

Vicious submarine activities by the Germans, their barbarous treatment of prisoners and narrow escapes of two Americans from becoming victims of the under-water boats swarming the high seas like sharks were visualized by the Leg Legerts, who have completed a world tour, in an interview given to a Graphic reporter here recently. The Leg Legerts who are on the Hippodrome circuit, appeared at the Orpheum last week. They arrived in America last May with many thrilling tales and the harrowing experiences in the submarine zones are still fresh in their minds.

"We sailed from Sidney, Australia, on the H. M. S. A-67 with 1,000 Australian troops aboard. Our destination was Cape Town, South Africa. We had landed safely, but there were troops still on the boat when it was hit by a torpedo from a German submarine. Sixteen officers, six privates and 31 nurses were killed."

"In South Africa we obtained photographs of young British soldiers, who were victims of the first German cruelty. The Germans had gouged out their eyes and placed pearl buttons in their sockets. The way they treated the enemy is unbelievable. But at that time they were sure they were going to win and felt as if they could do as they pleased. We did not bring the photographs with us for fear of being detained on our trip."

"We sailed from Cape Town on the Norman Castle, a 9,000 ton ship, for England. On the way the wireless operator received an S. O. S. call from the Ballarat, which was in our convoy. Our ship was speeded toward the scene and when we arrived we found only a mass of wreckage—the work of a German submarine. We were all leaning over the railing, all so excited that we didn't realize our danger. There were some on board with cameras ready to take snap shots of submarines. Our rifle preservers were close at hand. While near the spot where the Ballarat had gone down another S. O. S. came from another ship."

"The Norman Castle was headed in that direction, but a later message warned us and other boats in the convoy to head for safety as there were two German submarines standing by the ship, which had not been torpedoed, but set on fire by shell fire. When the word came to beat it we launched forth with all speed, arriving safely. We sailed into an England port just three hours after five German destroyers had sent two American tramp ships to the bottom.

"While in England there were three air attacks made by the Germans. Every place was dark. Searchlights played upon the skies all the time. All we could hear was the tramp, tramp, of the patrol."

"We departed on the Carmania, a ship whose passenger capacity in normal times is from 3,000 to 3,500, but there were only 35 passengers, outside of the crew, to brave the dangers of the submarines. The American gunners are held in the highest esteem. On most of all the allied ships they have American gunners or else British gunners, who have received training on American ships."

"For eight days and nights we slept with our clothes on, with life belts at our side and lights out—always with the dread of submarines."

"Food in England is dirt cheap compared with the prices in the United States. The people are not allowed to spend more than 30 cents for a meal, with the privilege of 12 cents extra for coffee, cream and sugar. Potatoes sell at 25 cents a peck in England, compared with the higher price in the United States."

"In southwest South Africa a new coin is being issued known as the German 'five hellers.' It is equal to one cent in American money and is made from the remnants of shells in the world-war zone. Germany has been so scraped of its gold that the creation of the 'five hellers' is the sequel."

Why the Weather Bureau?

Why the weather bureau? This question is likely to be asked, in more or less querulous tones, whenever the local weather prediction fails, as it often does, says the Popular Science Monthly. The inquirer overlooks the fact that the weather bureau has much more important things to foretell than ordinary changes of weather. It predicts with certainty great windstorms, destructive floods, severe frozes and other atmospheric visitations that endanger life and property on a large scale and collects climatic statistics for scientific agriculture.

Paper for Excelsior.

A machine has been brought out recently which shreds various kinds of paper that are fed into it, making it into soft material which can be used for packing in place of excelsior and the like. By utilizing their waste paper in this way, many firms are reducing the cost of preparing fragile goods for shipment.

GERMAN-AMERICANS TO DEFEND ADOPTED HOME

Otto H. Kahn, the New York Banker and head of the Metropolitan Opera House Company, one of the most eminent of German born Americans, speaking of the Liberty Loan and war war finance before the Harrisburg, Pa., Chamber of Commerce, said in part:

"God strengthen the conscience and the understanding, the will and the power of the German people so that they may find the only road which will give to the world an early peace, and in time, lead Germany back into the family of nations from which it is now outcast."

"I speak as one who has seen the spirit of the Prussian governing class at work from closeby, having at its disposal and using to the full, practically every agency for moulding the public mind."

"I have watched it proceed with relentless persistency and profound cunning to instill into the nation the demoniacal obsession of power-worship and world dominion, to modify and pervert the mentality, indeed, the very fibre and moral substance of the German people—a people which until misled, corrupted and systematically poisoned by the Prussian ruling caste, was, and deserved to be, an honored, valued and welcome member of the family of Nations."

"I have hated and loathed that spirit ever since it came within my ken many years ago, hated it all the more as I saw it ruthlessly pulling down a thing which was dear to me, the old Germany to which I was linked by ties of blood, by fond memories and cherished sentiments."

"From each of my visits to Germany for twenty-five years, I came away more appalled by the sinister transmutation Prussianism had wrought amongst the people and by the portentous menace I recognized in it for the entire world."

"It had given to Germany unparalleled prosperity, beneficent and advanced social legislation and not a few other things of value, but it had taken in payment the soul of the race. It had made a 'devil's bargain.'"

"And when this war broke out in Europe, I knew that the issue had been joined between the powers of brutal might and insensate ambition on the one side and the forces of humanity and liberty on the other, between darkness and light."

"Many there were at that time—and amongst them men for whose character I had high respect and whose motives were beyond any possible suspicion—who saw their own and America's duty in strict neutrality, mentally and actually, but personally I believed from the beginning of the war, whether we liked all the elements of the Allies combination or not—and I certainly did not like the Allies of the Czars—that the cause of the Allies was America's Cause."

"The Duty of loyal allegiance and faithful service to his country, even unto death, rests, of course, upon every American."

"But, if it be possible to speak of a comparative degree concerning what is the highest as it is the most elementary attribute of citizenship, that duty may almost be said to rest with an even more solemn and compelling obligation upon Americans of foreign origin than upon native Americans."

"For, we Americans of foreign antecedents, are here not by the accidental right of birth, but by our own free choice for better or for worse."

"As Washington led Americans of British blood to fight against Great Britain; as Lincoln called upon Americans of the North to fight their very brothers of the South; so Americans of German descent are now summoned to join in our country's righteous struggle against a people of their own blood which, under the evil spell of a dreadful obsession, and, Heaven knows, through no fault of ours, has made itself the enemy of this peace-loving Nation."

NOTICE TO FARMERS

To the Farmers of this Vicinity:

Many complaints have come to us relative to the means of settlement employed by some companies which insured against drought and hail that we deem it necessary to notify you that in all cases where your crops were insured while in good condition, we advise you not to make settlement unless you get the amount for which you are insured, less crop received. The return of the premium notes and policies is not advised.

There is no need for any hasty settlement and we will be glad to have you write us inquiring about such companies before you make settlement.
