A board of arbitration sat on a dispute between Olaf A. Olson and R. F. Hawley, caused by the latter storing some goods in Olson's office after the recent fire. Olson claimed $20 rent and Hawley refused to pay that amount. Olson picked P. P. Lee and the two together selected J. H. Tompkins. The matter was settled amicably.

County Auditor Larson visited the Fargo jail Thursday and was shown the cell of a desperate prisoner, who nearly escaped. His cell door was bolted but no pad lock was placed on it and he forced the bolts at night. In some manner he dug through a solid brick wall a foot thick before his escape was detected. He told the jailer that had he been feeling well the night before, he would have gone through the wall.

E. D. Kelley's new building is completed. Ed hired his workmen and superintended the erection of the three story structure himself. His men continually asked for plans, but the inimitable Ed quieted them, telling them they had not arrived yet. The building is completed and the plans are still on the way, in fact there never were any. Ed occupies a comfortable "Den" in the third story and every evening gives Sangerfests and "smoke talks" to his friends.

It is surprising to note the number of material improvements which are taking place in North Dakota towns each week as chronicled by our exchanges. There is scarcely a village, town or city in the state which is not making improvements along some line or other. During the past year hamlets have grown to important business centers, and where there was nothing but the wild prairie a little more than a year ago, now stand thriving little towns. That our young state is making phenomenal strides cannot be denied. Nor is this building along the boom line. It is substantial and will remain permanently as monuments to the progressiveness of North Dakota settlers.—Towner News.
