BRIEF STATE NEWS

"When the 'Swallows' homeward fly,
That's the time to sing 'Bone Dry.'
When the Robins come again,
'Tis a time to set the Hen.
There's no cream for Oatmeal now,
'Til we milk some fellow's cow.
What with meatless, wheatless days,
We're a Hobo, out to graze."

Rugby is both threatened and promised with a woman for mayor of the town. Why not?

At the township election held at Wolford, not a single or married woman turned out to vote.

Nobody in Minto desires the ob of village marshal.

Reports have arrived from tillers of the soil, announcing that the spring drive is on.

They don't call 'em "chickens" in France. Too tough. Mud hens for the young and pelicans for the more experienced.

The reason the "hogs" in North Dakota are not baconed and pig-knuckled is because they are two feet short.

North Dakota "hogs" are the best advertised animiles in the United States. There seems to be a wonderful variety.

Editor Thurston, of Oliver county, was taken to Jamestown by a bunch of friends last week. "Bert" managed to escape and is back on the Center Republican.

The village election at Plaza passed off very quietly, the only contest being for assessor, Erfert beating Smith for the ob. Is the the same Plaza Smith who once ran for governor?

That wild geese and ducks are coming north in abundance may be attributed to the roar of army ordnance across the pond. It frightens everything else why no the game birds.

A report of the Farmers State Bank appearing in the Pierce County Tribune shows less than one thousand dollars on deposit and now the editor will have to do some tall explaining.

Why don't the High School girls organize a "Gingham Club?" The dresses can be made plenty short and then shrink enough for observatory purposes.

A Sanish man laims he is doing his bit by wearing his trousers until the seat has become so shiny he can hang them up and see to shave from the glassy surface.

It is reported that A. M. Young, who presided at the editorial desk of the Charbonneau Herald during the winter, has been appointed as editor of the Farmers Press at Amidon N. D.
