Minot Lumberman Indulges in Rhyme

E. E. Emmerson, well known Minot lumberman, sat down one evening and wrote a little jingo about the war. He went south on business, Mrs. Emmerson ran across the copy and handed it to the Independent. Mr. Emmerson will probably be real angry when he finds it in print, but he's so far away that it won't do him any particular good. Here it is:

The war in France is over,
The boys are coming home.
Each message from across the sea
Takes on a brighter tone.

Our President went "over there"
To help those Allied Peers
Dish up a dose for Kaiser Bill
That will hold the "Hun" for years.

We have no fears 'twill be "too light"
For that could never stand,
Old Germany will have "pay"
For the deeds of her "bloody hand".

The Belgian crime must be wiped out
If such a thing can be.
And all things be restored to them
From the Frontier to the Sea.

The French must have Alsace-Lorain.
Their land must be rebuilt.
The Germans led by lust and greed
Must answer for the Kaiser's guilt.

In Italy the tyrant's hand
Fell hard along the Triest Pieve
But now the Haughty Austrian Hoss
Must pay for her allied knave.

Poor Servia trampled under foot
And driven from her borders
No longer fears the Austrian Hordes
Nor takes the Kaiser's orders.

We're not afraid that Germany
And her allied, murderous bunch,
Will ever be in shape again.
Ho deliver a punch.

For Mr. Wilson's on the job,
With four well-versed advisers,
And d when the "new map" of Europe is drawn
There'll be no place for Kaisers.
