State Master Williams Tells What the Grange is Doing

The Grange is a fraternal organization of farmers and others who are directly or indirectly interested in agriculture, to secure educational, social, financial and legislative benefits; national in scope, non-partisan in politics, but truly patriotic, seeking to develop the highest standard of citizenship, non-sectarian in religion, but having its high ideas of morality, founded on the teachings of the bible. Seeking to restore agriculture to the place assigned it by the Father of his country. Including in its membership not only the farmer, but also his family.

Organization Necessary to Progress
The absolute necessity of organization is shown by the author of the Universe, for in the beginning after arranging Paradise in the Garden of Eden, God foresaw the necessity of organization, so he created and sanctified the home. Primitive man being helpless as an individual, and having few advantages over the animals, tribal organizations were necessary for protection against their common enemy. By the association of these tribes into nations, humanity began to ascend the scale of civilization; so today, standing in the sunlight of twentieth century progress, looking back at the beginning in barbarism, we see in our present civilization the fruits of organization.

When the embattled farmers of the Colonies resisted King George, they first had to learn, that if success was to be obtained, the thirteen separate colonies must form a united whole. As a result of this union, the history of the world was changed, suffering humanity took hope, and the united action not only made American the garden spot of liberty, but blessed mankind the whole world round. Organization having been necessary in securing all past progress, we find it as true as when uttered "Liberty and union, now and forever, one and inseparable". So progress along all lines must depend largely upon the character and strength of the various organizations that promote the interests of their respective callings. Never in the world's history, has as nearly every vocation in life been so thoroughly organized as today, when every department of commerce, manufacture and finance are thoroughly prepared to act in unison on all matters effecting their welfare; when labor through its unions, can speak as one man, and its members are willing to suffer all manner of privations and hardships for the supposed good of the common calling.

Farmers must learn to profit by these examples, and keep step to the music of the age; for, whether we like it or not, these organizations of capital and labor are here, and here to stay. Agriculture then, to protect itself from these two gigantic contenting forces, to say to each, you must obey the law; to maintain the dignity of its calling; to elevate agriculture to its proper place; to secure a just reward for their labor; to ennoble farm life; to secure just legislation; to educate and elevate the American farmer; to develop a higher and better manhood and womanhood; in short, to secure a square deal for all, farmers MUST have a thorough and strong organization.

Such an organization must stand on high ideals, must seek to benefit all American farmers, "must not call the farmer from his work and place his mind upon some other subject, but by cheerful instruction lighten and elevate his labor. Must be so constructed to supply the educational, social, financial and co-operative needs of all local communities, uniting them when needed into a county association. Then these local and county associations must form a state association to be able to speak for the farmers of the state on all matters of legislation—to secure good laws and defeat bad ones, to supervise the educational and business interests of the farmers of the state. These state organizations must form a powerful national fraternity to promote, protect and defend the educational, social, legislative and financial interests of all farmers in the Republic.

This organization should be so arranged that each individual member has his proportional work and responsibility in achieving success; and lastly it must have sufficient financial standing to guarantee its permanency. Measuring up to this standard, we absolutely know but one organization, and that is what is known as the grange.

There have been many so-called farmer organizations, that have sprung up at various times since the grange was organized, claiming the grange was too slow, they proposed to accomplish much; procure the very legislation that was needed, secure better prices, in short correct all the ills that the farmer is heir to; some of them done some good, some done much good, but today they all lie buried in an unmarked grave, while the grange goes on triumphant. The reasons are obvious, there has never yet been another organization of the agricultural class founded on such lofty principles.

And so today, let's not lose sight of the fact, that after all there is more to life than just the dollars and cents side, and while we may expect some good to come from an organization that is founded alone on business principles, any organization must have higher ideals to make it perpetual.

We ask you to consider the Grange. T. M. WILLIAMS, State Master.

Good Times Just Ahead

PROSPERITY is within our reach in America.

All we need to have and to hold it is a sane, sure grasp on its simple elements.

They are Industry, Integrity, and Faith.

These are the cardinal virtues of human relation. They are the underpinnings of healthy, natural business life and the foundation of a wholesome social system.

They are the fountainhead from which Progress springs. A well-known business economist has called them the "Fundamentals of Prosperity."

Your purchases are an expression of Faith. They are evidence of your industry. Make them confidently from business institutions of Integrity.

Buying is the backbone of prosperity. An active market means more employment; weekly earnings; benefits are passed around.

Wise spending gives stability to earning and for that reason is farsighted thrift and sound economy.

The call of to-day is for cheerful thinking, willing working and constructive action by you—everybody—NOW.

To-morrow's change for the better will come about through the combined efforts of each and every one of us.

By sheer force of numbers and co-operation, by the high power of heart and mind, we can put Business on a firm, stable basis.

We can do this because all of the material factors making for better business are right.

Let us link our faith with industry, our vision with courage, and forge ahead.

Let's make an uncombined effort toward a common end—Good Times.
