

PETITIONS NOW OUT TO RECALL THREE; MAKE 7 LAWS

Throughout North Dakota this week petitions are being circulated for initiated laws and asking for an election in which it is proposed to recall the governor, attorney general and commissioner of agriculture and labor. The petitions now in circulation take the place of similar ones circulated earlier in the year at a time that it was proposed to have another battle of ballots early this summer.

One of the initiated laws deals with the amount of bonded indebtedness that may be incurred. It provides for a limit of two and a half millions for the mill and elevator association; a quarter million for home building and not to exceed five millions to pay the debts of the Bank of North Dakota to counties, schools and cities having money now "frozen" at Bismarck.

Another initiated law provides for the election of state officers without regard to political affiliations. A third proposed law provides for separate party ballots in primary elections and for a one-column ballot at general elections.

The fourth proposed law deals with providing public depositories. It makes banks, under certain conditions, eligible as depositories and provides how official boards shall deposit public moneys.

Another proposed law is to change the make-up of the industrial commission to contain the secretary of state, treasurer and commissioner of agriculture, to serve until the next legislature when the governor will name the three members of the commission, to be approved then by the senate.

In another law it is proposed to establish a rural credits law that will permit loaning of money to farmers on easy terms and at low interest, the money to be obtained from the sale of bonds.

The seventh proposed law is an act for the dissolution of the Bank of North Dakota.
