

WHY FARMERS SHOULD KEEP RECORD OF HIS BUSINESS

Fargo, N. D.—New income tax regulations providing that farmers who realize a loss one year can deduct this loss from any profits the following year make it more important that the farmer keep records of his business," declares Rex E. Willard, farm economist of the North Dakota Agricultural College, in announcing that "The North Dakota Farm Account Book," published by the Agricultural College, is now ready for distribution.

This book is for farm and household records. It follows the plan recommended by the American Farm Bureau Federation and commended by the Bureau of Internal Revenue, and is so simple that anyone who can read or write can keep a record of his business.

The single entry form is used and there is no posting. Each entry made becomes a part of the permanent record. The 1922 book contains separate accounts for determining the cost of tractor and automobile operation and threshing. The household accounts include groceries and the value of food from the farm. Space is provided for making inventory of all classes of stock and calculating depreciation of machinery. Summary forms necessary for the income tax report can be removed from the book so that the farmer will not have to make out a work sheet. The book has a thumb index for each account.

Farmers who are interested may obtain these books from their County agent or from the Department of Farm Management at the North Dakota Agricultural College at a nominal fee covering the cost of printing.

Arthur Landon received a message Monday of the death of his mother at Bryant, S. D. He left Tuesday to be present at her funeral. Mrs. Landon will be remembered by a number in this vicinity, as she visited here several times in the past and she held a warm place in the affections of her friends. She leaves to mourn her death besides her husband, one daughter, Florence, and one son, Arthur. She has gone but her influence will be deeply felt, cherished and missed in the years to come. "To live in hearts we leave behind is not to die."

Stoudt's Poultry Win At Show

John Stoudt, who has won fame in North Dakota for breeding pure bred Rhode Island Poultry, sent a pen of five birds to the state poultry show at Fargo, getting third on cock and third on pullet. Mr. Stoudt won a couple of firsts last year at the same show. There is usually but a fraction of a point difference between a first and a third.

Harry Blom, formerly a Drady farmer, who moved to California, a year ago, recently bought a 15-acre "ranch" near Santa Cruz and is enjoying life. He is able to keep six cows on his tract and several hundred chickens.

Hay Markets

Upland hay is retailing in Minot at from $13 to $14 per ton. Farmers are bringing in hay loose and delivering it in mows at from $10 to $14 per ton. Upland hay is in better demand than the ordinary slough hay. It is reported that hay is selling in stacks at from $4 to $6 a ton.

Notwithstanding the fact that money is scarce and business a little dull, eastern catalogue houses are energetically sending their catalogues to the people and will do the usual amount of business unless the merchants use their best weapons freely—their local newspapers.

Berthold Masons honored the venerable F. C. Walther, "Father of Berthold," who was 80 years of age Jan. 23. Mr. Walther is a Civil war veteran and an especially well preserved man for his years. He has always led a very active life which no doubt accounts for his continued capacity for service. An interesting patriotic program was rendered, which included several appropriate addresses by leading citizens.

The Northern States Power Co. has an interesting contrivance in the form of a thermometer which sets on top of their South Main Street building. In the office below the thermometer for each of the 24 hours is registered on a circular disc which is turned beneath a pencil by clock work. The outfit cost about $250 and Manager McGuire has saved himself from a frosted nose many a time through its observance.
