

DAIRY

DAIRY RECORD QUITE USEFUL

Profitable Practice to Keep Daily Tab on Cows Where There is No Test Association.

Keeping daily records of the milk yield of each cow, where there is no cow testing association, is a profitable practice. This is shown by reports on herd records received by the United States Department of Agriculture.

An instance where a herd has been greatly improved without increasing its numbers (by more than one cow) is found in a report from Oklahoma.

Weighing and Recording Milk.

The dairyman's cream checks for a given month amounted to $78.42, the cream being obtained from a herd of 87 cows. One year later, after doing hard-record work, he was able with a herd of 28 cows, just one more than he had at the earlier date, to sell cream to the value of $228.60, or nearly three times as much—a pretty good return for care given to culling the herd and improving the management.

While the current prices for butterfat have increased somewhat, they have not trebled in a year, so it is obvious that there has been a large increase in the productiveness of the herd.

WISCONSIN HAS FINE HERDS

Ranks Third Among States Active in Eradicating Tuberculosis—Minnesota is First.

Recent field reports on official tuberculin testing in Wisconsin show large gains in the number of herds in that state accredited as being free from tuberculosis. In the month of May Wisconsin made the largest gain of any state, with an increase of 47 accredited herds. Although all reports have not yet been analyzed, the June records are expected to show Wisconsin, with a further gain of 92 accredited herds, still making the most rapid progress.

Although last year about eighth in rank compared with other states active in eradicating bovine tuberculosis, the Badger state has recently forged to third place. Minnesota is first with 500 accredited herds, and Virginia is second with 337. On July 31 Wisconsin had 362 accredited herds. The figures are from records of the federal bureau of animal industry based on field reports up to July 31, 1920.

GRIND ALFALFA AND CLOVER

Practice in Some Communities Found to Be Economical—Cattle Eat More of Stalk.

Many of the dairymen who have more than 15 head of cattle would find it profitable to get a grinder large enough to grind alfalfa or clover, especially if they expect to feed mammoth clover. The practice is general in some communities to shred the stover and feed this to cows. The cattle will eat more of the stalk and the remainder makes very good bedding when mixed with the straw.

FALL FRESHENING IN FAVOR

Results in Greater Production of Milk and Butterfat, According to Specialists.

Fall freshening results in greater milk and butterfat production than spring or summer freshening. The dairy husbandry specialists at the Iowa agricultural experiment station who have studied many records say that fall freshening gives about 10 per cent greater production than either spring or summer freshening.

DISCARD UNPROFITABLE COW

Better Than an Empty Stall Providing She is Producing Offspring Better Than Herself.

The unprofitable cow does not deserve any defense nor should she be allowed to fill a stall in the barn to the exclusion of a better cow. But she is better than an empty stall provided she is given a chance to produce offspring better than herself. Then she is fulfilling a purpose.

Bear Cubs Born in Captivity

They look rather like a pair of bull pups as they sprawl weakly on the table in front of their owner, but they are that very rare thing, bear cubs born in captivity. And, also, they are hybrid bears, their mother having been a Siberian and their father an American bear. Their birth, in Paris, was a complete surprise to everyone but Mrs. Bear, and her owner, a Swiss named Adde Faron, named them "Boudaine" (All of a Sudden) and "Imprevu" (Unexpected).
